The Question of Fruit Shipments.

HOOD RIVER, March 7, 1898.—Editor GLACIER: With the exception of some who are said to be "as independent as a hog on ice," we can all agree with Mr. Davidson in a late circular wherein he says, "It is a self-evident fact that intelligent co-operation in the marketing of strawberries is absolutely necessary in order to obtain the best results." The emphasis should be on the word intelligent.

Mr. Davidson's proposition that we have two shipping concerns here, that we load cars together and have a joint representative in Montana, etc., seems to me quite impracticable. In the first place, each union must have a management of its own and be at liberty to use its best judgment as to the amount of fruit to send to a given market. On this point the two unions might not agree. If it is supposed, however, that the two unions would always agree on this point, then the judgment of one is as good as that of two, and one union is sufficient. The two unions might differ again as to who would serve us best as commission men. But if they should agree on one commission house, then why two unions? Two commission houses handling fruit for two unions might not prove altogether loving, one toward the other, even if the two unions should seem to be ever so affectionate.

In carload business one union might wish to divert a car. The possibility of doing so would depend upon an agreement between two rival unions—a kind of international agreement, so to speak. Can we expect rivals to agree, always? They would be rivals, otherwise there would be one union, not two.

As to two representatives agreeing on a minimum price, I do not think that one representative can dictate a price and always get it. But one man can dictate as well as two, or ten. It is not the province of a representative to dictate prices any further than to be satisfied that the commission man is doing as well as can be done considering the condition of the market. He may have the assurance of a certain price for the day, but he must be satisfied that such assurance is well founded before he turns over the fruit to be sold. But having distributed his car of fruit to the different commission men with whom he is doing business, he should not be like the man who hires a boss carpenter then proceeds to boss the job himself. He may, however, require that the boss execute the work according to the specifications and the agreement or get one who will. One day last summer our commission man in Butte assured me that he would take orders at a certain price. But one of his officious salesmen sold a lot of berries to some of his pet customers for a quarter less per crate. On learning this I simply asked the principal of that house whether he or his salesman ran the establishment. The shortage was made good.

It has been said that on one day I did not interpose my influence to raise the price of the Davidson Fruit Co.'s berries when I had no berries. I did not go to Montana to sell berries for the Davidson Fruit Co. nor to interfere with their business in any way. My chief anxiety at that time was to prevent a further decline in prices. I have seen the folly of overstocking a market and at the same time "holding" for a certain price till—as was done in Butte by the Davidson Fruit Co., scores of hold-over crates go to peddlers at peddler's prices. I did not go to the agent of the opposition, offering to meddle with his business, because I would not care to have anybody meddle with my business. Now, as to the Davidson Fruit Co. getting better prices, why did they not come to us in the beginning offering to ship into Montana during the early part of the season only their fair proportion of berries? But when, a little later on, they began to accumulate piles of hold-over berries, thereby weakening the market, they were willing to take the blame of the inevitable drop in prices.

Again, why did they quit the Butte market and recall their agent when the prices were the lowest, leaving to us the prospect of a still further drop while at the same time they unloaded some shipments onto the union here, leaving to us the responsibility of handling the Hood River berries in a ruined market? No man can say that the union overstocked the Montana market at any time. But our friends the enemy saw fit to leave us to manage the situation if we could, first selling a wagon load of berries which had accumulated at Stromberg's to a peddler at a price that made him smile aloud. I was a witness to the transaction.

Then came our first carload. Considering the collapse in the Montana markets due to indiscriminate shipments from many points and to our beautiful system of home competition, how was it possible for us to receive car loads in Butte and at the same time advance the price? Gentlemen, don't all speak at once.

It was well understood last year that the Davidson Fruit Co. expected to "do up" the union—which Mr. Davidson himself had labored to establish and which he seemed to believe in as long as he was manager. The responsibility of maintaining a co-operative union rests with the growers notwithstanding self-elected "managers."

Asks for the County Surveyor.
HOOD RIVER, March 8, 1898.—Editor GLACIER: My neighbor (Morgan) tells us that certain parties are distressed over the fact that we have built an addition to our hog house, claiming that it is "in the road." This hog house is an old blacksmith shop, built on our land some 13 or 14 years ago. It is about 20 feet west of our east line. Soon after it was built Henry Cox (as Wilson told us) sent word to Supervisor Wilson that he must tear down the shop. Wilson, being an honest man, refused to do so. We have been to the expense of having Paradise farm surveyed by three different surveyors and are willing to abide by our lines as already run.

If A. S. Blowers, Lyman Smith and Mrs. Alma Howe, who have fenced in a part of our land as per our survey, are willing to do the honorable thing, they will join with us in getting the present county surveyor to run the lines, and we will abide by his survey, as we have confidence in his ability and honesty and do not believe he will keep running different lines till he finally locates the line just where interested parties tell him to. Why is it that O. L. Stranahan can shut up a long-traveled and much-used road and make people go a long ways out of the way when we give all the road on our east line on this corner, and then people in town tell new-comers we have no right to build on our own land? We propose to have our lines run and shall ask all parties to abide by the decision of the surveyor. Any man who will try to defraud us of any of our rightful possessions by reason of so many years of "peaceable possession" would refuse to pay a just debt because it was outlawed.
M. SUE ADAMS.

Birthdays Party.

A surprise party was given Monday evening, March 7th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Koplin, in honor of the 18th birthday of their son, Walter Hull. It was largely attended by the youth and beauty of the valley and was in every way the most successful party of the season. An elegant supper was served at 11 o'clock, and after a most enjoyable evening spent, the guests, after wishing Walter many happy returns of the day, departed for their homes at 12 o'clock. Those present were: Mrs. Koplin, Samuel Koplin, Mrs. Calkins, Walter Hull, Margaret Locke, Sam Blowers, Helen Davenport, Mell Foley, Ida Foss, Emory Davenport, Grace Campbell, Willie Warren, Ella Isenberg, Emory Davenport, Lulu Absten, Frank Parker, Helen Absten, Frank Parker, Fay LaFrance, Frank Davenport, Bernice Foley, Elmer Campbell, Laura Ellis, Alfred Eastman, May Boorman, George Boorman, Maude Parker, Grace Rogers, Clara Blythe.

The first number of Sherman county's new paper, the Moro Leader, has been received. It is straight-out, gold-standard republican in politics and presents a neat typographical appearance.

The Moro Observer tells this sad story: "A Yambhill school teacher whipped a pupil so severely as to cause his parents much anxiety. Every time a friend called to sympathize with the mother she sent her boy out in the yard to get a stick of the same size that was used in whipping him, to show to the sympathizer." The boy brought in a larger stick every time, and finally began to carry in logs of such size that he one day over-exerted his strength, ruptured a blood vessel and died!

At Wapinitia, this county, a saloon keeper persisted in dealing out liquors to the son of the village blacksmith in spite of the latter's remonstrance. The finale is given by the Dufur Dispatch: "The Wapinitia saloon is no more. The village blacksmith closed it. He thumped the dispenser, the furniture, glassware, doors and windows until they looked like the Maine wreck down in Havanna harbor. He then sauntered out! The remains of the proprietor, and they 'scattered.'"

Reginald de Koven and Sir Arthur Sullivan have both been commissioned by the Ladies' Home Journal to give a musical setting to Rudyard Kipling's great "Recessional" poem written for the Queen's Jubilee. De Koven has finished his setting of the poem as a hymn with chorus and solo, and the composition will be published in its entirety in a forthcoming issue of the Ladies' Home Journal.

Noted for size, early maturity, and acknowledged by all poultrymen to be the best winter egg producing bird in existence. These birds often dress 7 pounds at 9 months old, thus combining both egg-producing qualities and meat in one bird. This grand breed of fowls should be on every farm in the valley. I have spared no time nor money in securing the best stock obtainable, and by careful mating for a number of years I now have a fine lot of these grand birds.
