FRIDAY, AUGUST 5, 1898.

In answer to the Spanish overtures for peace President McKinley and his cabinet demand—first, that Cuba shall be free; second, that Porto Rico be ceded to the United States; third, that one of the Ladrone Islands be ceded for a coaling station; fourth, that all Spanish military forces in the West Indies be immediately withdrawn. In regard to the Philippines, the cabinet agreed to leave the disposition to be made of them to a joint commission of Americans and Spaniards. Only one member of the cabinet is said to have been in favor of holding the Philippines. The president evidently does not favor holding anything more in the Philippines than a coaling station, with privileges of trade with the islands to be agreed upon by the commissioners. The senate will have to be called together to ratify the treaty of peace, otherwise the negotiations would soon be closed in a manner honorable, and we believe acceptable to a large majority of the American people. The fact that every suggestion the president has made in the prosecution of the war has proved to be right gives assurance that he can be trusted in the peace negotiations. Let us have peace so that our soldier boys can return home.

We hear too much in these days about "prosperity," as though material welfare and larger cash profits were the most important things in life. They are not to be despised, but how rich life may be without either of them! It is not how much money one piles up, but how much pleasure he gets and gives in this world, that really adds to the sum of human happiness. We know many a farmer's family who, though poor in purse, are wealthy in the enjoyment of hosts of friends and happy with a health and zest for life that many a millionaire envies. The "touch of sympathy that makes the whole world kin," is common among our rural people, and creates a neighborliness that townfolk know not of. It is well to keep these thoughts in mind, and for each of us to try to do our part to make our own little world the better, instead of becoming wholly interested in crops, prices, money and individual or national expansion.—Farm and Home.

Last Monday, August 1st, a change of officials was made in The Dalles land office. Mr. Jas. F. Moore as register and Mr. W. H. Biggs as receiver gave place to the new officials, Jay P. Lucas and Otis Patterson. The outgoing officials have served long and faithfully, and patrons of the office will regret their going, but when they meet with their successors they will find just as gentlemanly and genial men to do business with.

A soldier in a Massachusetts regiment died the other day in Cuba from homesickness. This is a disease that often kills when soldiers are afflicted. During our civil war when the boys became sick and could think and talk of nothing but home, the only sure cure was a furlough.

Admiral Dewey says it will require 150,000 troops to subdue the Philippine islands. The Pacific coast states alone could send that many jingoes who are ill'ly over with patriotism and would enlist to a man rather than see one foot of captured territory given up.

Senatorial courtesy will require that haste be made slowly in ratifying a treaty of peace. There may be time enough yet to add two more senatorial votes for imperialism by the admission of Hawaii.

Viento Items.

The Viento Sunday school will picnic next Sunday.

Mr. Hale, of the contract firm of Hale & Smith, paid off his men last Friday and moved camp to Wyeth.

C. M. Knapp has bought a farm at Bridal Veil and will move there in October.

B. K. Berthelson and Henry Shute returned from a trip to Lost Lake on Friday, bringing a fine lot of fish.

Among the Hood River boys at work in Viento are R. J. Tucker, Wm. Ellis, Chas. Wallace and Alfred Eastman.

The Misses Cora and Carrie Coppie visited their sister, Mrs. James W. Taylor, in her cosy new house last week.

Mrs. S. W. Curran's boarding house keeps up its reputation for first-class meals and home-like surroundings. Mr. Curran's park is a popular resort for picnics.

The Oregon Lumber Co. employs a large force of men. One hundred and fifty carloads of lumber were shipped from Viento last month.

S. W. Curran and D. D. McIntire returned last week from a trip to Yakima, where they went to find a stock ranch, in which they were unsuccessful.

A copy of the Klondike Nugget, dated Dawson, N. W. T., July 9, 1898, was received at this office August 2d. It was sent by Joseph A. Wilson to L. H. Adams of Portland and was brought to Hood River last Monday by N. C. Evans. It is a paper of two pages, four short columns to the page, and costs 50 cents a copy. It contained no news of importance.

The Lawn Fete at Paradise Farm.

The ice cream festival given by the ladies of the Oregon Emergency Corps, Friday evening, on the lawn at Paradise farm, was a success. The ladies sold ice cream and cake and lemonade, the proceeds going to the hospital fund for the Oregon boys in the Philippines. The Hood River brass band was present and played patriotic airs. Hon. W. P. Watson, chairman of the evening, with appropriate remarks introduced the various speakers. Rev. J. T. Merrill responded to repeated calls of his name and in a short talk expressed the patriotic sentiments of those around him by instilling a feeling of pride that made them glad to know that they were Americans. Dr. W. L. Adams then followed with a lengthy address in which he spoke for America's development and policy of annexation, denouncing those opposed to territorial expansion over the islands of the sea as "copperheads." He began by telling of the respect shown him while on a trip to South America years ago, just before he was an American. Then to show how small we were he compared our world to the planet Jupiter, saying that, if things were proportionately greater on that globe, women there must be 16,000 feet tall. As considered by some, he said, the Pope of Rome has as great power as any one person in the world; but suppose by some means he fell from the earth and landed in a flower garden of one of the women of Jupiter, he would be kicked up by the point of a pin and exhibited as the latest thing in a tumbler bar. We must expand, he said. We have been growing ever since our country comprised but a narrow strip along the Atlantic seaboard, and with every new growth of our nation there was a party in opposition; but these parties in opposition to territorial expansion were forced to meet the inevitable and succumb to the destiny of the republic. Such is the fate in store for the copperheads of today. The English language is fast becoming the language of the civilized world, and it is fitting that we, the most enterprising people of the English-speaking race, should subjugate the rest of the world as a duty to humanity. He then dwelt on the cruelties practiced by the early Spanish conquerors, Cortez and Cortez, upon the Incas and the Aztecs. These and many others are examples of Spanish cruelty, the penalty for which is now falling upon the head of dying Spain.

Mr. M. P. Isenberg then followed, taking up and pursuing the same theme. The band discoursed more music and everybody ate ice cream and cake, that Oregon troops at the front might be provided with comforts and luxuries not usually provided for by army hospitals in the field.

The receipts of the evening amounted to $25.70.

Leasing the Deschutes.

The question of leasing the Deschutes has again been brought up. We supposed that question had been settled in Crook county. A proposition to lease the Deschutes, provided the county would give them a franchise, was made several years ago and the people so universally condemned the measure that our county court refused to grant a lease.

Now comes a corporation from Sherman county and asks for a franchise of the Deschutes river. Sherman county has given her consent. We have not heard of the result in Wasco county. In Crook county no action has been taken for the simple reason no petition had been presented to the county court asking for such a lease. If we are not mistaken the only proposition in reference to leasing the Deschutes was a letter written by one of the county commissioners of Wasco county to Judge Willis stating a proposition had been presented to the county court of Wasco "and if he would just come down they would talk the matter over." Judge Willis very promptly and pertinently replied that he did business at the court house at Prineville and any matter pertaining to the leasing of the river would have to be presented in the regular order.

We are in favor of protecting all kinds of business but we are not in favor of giving any man or set of men a monopoly in any kind of business. Competition is the only remedy that the people have against corporations and while the waters of the Deschutes flow let them be free for the use of whomever desires to use them.

The gentlemen who compose this company are no doubt business men and would do a legitimate business, but we are opposed to the principle of giving one man or set of men an exclusive control of any of our waterways, and we hope that our county court will promptly "set down" on the measure, if it should ever come before them.—Prineville Review.

Misery of Inactive Camp Life.

Rochester Herald.

In summing up the achievements of the heroes under Shafter we must not forget the physical agony they have endured as an unavoidable incident to their sojourn in a strange and hostile climate. To the great majority of them no doubt, the actual fighting was the least bitter of their experience; was, indeed, a welcome distraction from the enervating routine of camp life under such conditions.

"Did the soldiers appreciate those night-shirts we sent them?" "I should say so; they used them to clean their guns."—Chicago Record.

Lanching of the Battleship Oregon.

[Following is a poem written by Sam Simpson, October 23, 1893, in honor of the launching of the battleship Oregon from the yards of the Union Iron works in San Francisco. Couched in the words of the classics, and breathing a forecast of the grand work of this, the battleship, which is our navy's pride and the world's wonder. It is more fitting to reproduce the words as aptly written by Mr. Simpson.—Eugene Guard.]

O ship, like crested Pallas armed:
O bride, the hoary god hath charmed,
Leap to thy proud and strong embrace,
In Freedom's squadron rank thy place.

Northward, in sheen of crystal mail;
A scurf of cloud upon her breast,
Our mountain monarch, Hood, will hail
The mighty daughter of the West;
And hail with broad, uplifted shield,
The sea, thy home and battle-field,
While the vast hosts of phalanxiers
Swirl the deep song of worshipers.

That brow of prescience, wreath'd with dreams,
The mist through which his grandeur gleams
In storm and calm, has broad'd o'er
The harpies that erstwhile came,
And wrought in tears, and blood, and flame,
That stripes might stream and stars might soar.
The luster of the chosen name.

Launched on the Golden-Gated bay
Be thine a royal bridal day;
And with the wave's exultant kiss
Come, bride, to meet the chosen bliss;
When Greece was life's white morning star;
Come, welcome to a scene like this,
Thou bride of Freedom's chosen name,
And Eric's crash of thunder, telling
How Perry's warrior heart was swelling;
Come through the somber dusk of years
Descend on this our chosen days;
And from a hero's frosting lip
The whisper, "Don't give up the ship."

To greet thy nuptials, here behold,
While o'er enchanted streams and woods
October's misted splendor broods,
Our forests lit with lamps of gold,
And many a leafy mountain shrine,
Dashed with the red autumnal wine,
For thee a symbol and a sign,
Of faith serene and trust unaid.

Oh, swift and strong and terrible:
Go forth to guard our cherished shore
Till all thy fated days are full
And war's hoarse call is heard no more.
Go forth, O wonder of the age,
And peerless may thy vigil be:
Till cape and bay and cliff and crag
Flash with the glory of the flag,
Triumphant on the lance of time,
And oh, guard well the gleaming strand
Of this, our fair Aetnaic land,
For in the storm of years to come,
With drain of heart and wound of hand,
When men could dare and do and die.

Be worthy of thy mystic name
These matchless vales and mountains bear;
That in the tents of sunset, fame
May twine a wreath for thee to wear,
And when thy flag shall kiss the breeze
Of these, our blue, Northwestern seas,
Lo, white and strange and soaring high
In the vast temple of the sky,
The peaks our hissing children know
A welcoming to thee will glow,
Heroes to Hood will pass the sign,
And Jefferson, with brown benign,
With signal to the Sisters Three
That the long watch was not in vain;
For lo, upon the radiant main,
The mailed patrol of Liberty
Here, at the mighty ocean gate,
Columbia, in his pride, will greet
The Bandiera of our fleet,
And from embattled heights the voice
Of cannon make the deep rejoice,
And fugal sunbeams gleam upon
The green, glad hills of Oregon,
Thine and our own deep-bosomed state.
