Belvidere, Ill., May 14, 1897.—Dear Sir: Some time ago I sent you a glass of jelly that had paraffine wax on top of it. My wife used wax last year to cover all her jelly and with the best results. It is a good deal quicker to apply than paper; also keeps the jelly from molding and growing tough on top. As you noticed, this jelly I sent you was as soft and nice on top as at the bottom, and if it had been covered with paper it would have been tough and leathery and very likely moldy. Our mode of application is to pour about 1 inch of melted wax over the top of the jelly and set it away for use The glass I sent you was between 9 and 10 months old. J. S. JOSLYN.
