SHIP ANDELANA GOES DOWN.

Wrecked at Coos Bay With Fifteen Men Aboard.

SUFFERED A SHIPWRECK.

On Their Way Westward--Landing--Court Among the Storm-Tossed Vessel.

The ANDERLANA, a small steamer, was wrecked at the mouth of the Coos River, Oregon, on the 19th instant. The vessel was bound from the mouth of the Columbia River, Oregon, to the port of Oakland, California, with a cargo of coal, and was prevented from entering the mouth of the Coos River, Oregon, by the fog which prevailed at the time. The vessel, with her cargo, was driven on the rocks, and was wrecked. The crew of the vessel, consisting of fifteen men, were rescued by the Life-Saving Station.
