Clarence English Writes of War.

MANILA, March 21, 1899.—Dear Mother: We have been out fighting insurgents and just got back yesterday. We were out at Pasig, a small city on an island in the big lake, nine miles east of I. e. e. We were in five different fights. Three of my company were wounded, one seriously, being shot in the instep. I was in the thickest of it every time but didn't get a scratch. We made the niggers get every time; drove them out of their trenches. My company was in the swim every time. We were out eight days. The first day we went to San Pedro Macaris and camped for the night; got up at sunrise and started for the insurgents. We had to carry blankets, ponchos, toilet soap, two pair socks, undershirt, shelter tent, haversack with 24 hours' rations, 200 rounds of ammunition, canteen, a roll of bandages, tin plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon; wore brown pants, blue shirts, brown coat and leggings and campaign hat. You can see that, for a tropical climate, we had enough to carry. But after the first two days we were furnished with a carabao and cart to carry our tents and undergarments. Some of the boys gave out, but my camping out trips hardened me so I stand it fine. The first day we drove the natives back about four or five miles, to Pasig. We took a good many prisoners and killed lots of them. The next day we had a skirmish in the morning and another in the afternoon. My company and I company were sent across the Pasig river to attack the insurgents on the left of the city of Pasig. We formed in line and marched down to the river bank and had a hot fight. Three men were wounded. We gave it to them hard and nearly silenced their fire, but the gunboat got stuck on a sandbar and could do nothing, so the Washingtons, who were to land on the south, could not cross and we were taken back. I company was held in reserve this day, so E company did all the fighting. Next day we went over and had it out with them. I company went in with us and we cleaned them out. They were in rifle trenches, breast high, with a river in front of them; we had no protection and were in full view most of the time. The captain ordered me to take three good shots and go down on a point and do sharp shooting. We had a fine position only 100 yards from the nearest part of their trenches. We stopped some of them from doing any more damage; in fact, cleaned those in our front out entirely. One of them cut a twig about a foot from my head, but that didn't bother me as I had previously got used to it. They can shoot all around us but seldom hit. Bullets were whistling all the time, as they do lots of firing and shoot twice to our once. We killed a lot of them this day. The battery did good work, also the 22d, and the Washington boys crossed over on the south side and took the town. They found all kinds of dead negroes where we killed them when they jumped out of their trenches and started to run. We then went back to our camp and staid three days, resting. On the third day we broke camp after dark and marched up the road to the lake and camped for the night. Next morning, Sunday, the 19th, we started out south along the lake, formed in line of battle from the lake west toward the bay to our lines in that direction, about three miles; the 22d regulars on the right and the Oregonians in the center, with the Washingtons on the left along the lake. The regulars, coming right from home, could not stand the heat like the volunteers, so consequently we left them behind so far that they were hardly in it at all this time. We burned everything as we came to it. The Washington boys burnt villages all the way along the lake. The Oregonians lost one killed and three wounded; and the Washingtons several killed and wounded. We cleaned this part of the country for about nine miles back and returned to camp, leaving the Washingtons and 22d to keep the line. I forgot to mention I have been appointed corporal.

Heavy rain Thursday morning, with snow on the hills.

Lost—A door key. Finder will please return to C. R. Bone.

Mrs. A. R. Middleton and Mrs. Ebert of Vancouver came up from Portland yesterday.

The twin boys of Dr. and Mrs. Jones of Portland are stopping with Mrs. Rose McCoy.

"Purpose and Will" contained a beautiful sentiment. At this point in the program Miss Agnes Ingelbrecht, as representative of the seventh grade, made a presentation of a beautiful floral piece, arranged in the form of a ladder and tied with both class colors, in a carefully worded speech. C. P. Logsdon, jr., president of the graduation class, responded, in a few concise words, thanking them for their thoughtfulness and esteem. Miss Nellie Clark, in the rendering of the song "Just as the Sun Went Down," did extremely well. Miss Ida Stranahan gave a brief but carefully worded review of the life and works of Longfellow. E. Hinrichs had Whittier as his subject. Mr. Hinrichs brought out quite forcibly Whittier's connection with the anti-slavery cause, and his pictures of home and boyhood life. The class of '98, represented by Miss Agnes Dukes, in a neat little speech, presented each member in the class of '99 with a lovely bunch of red and white carnations. An acceptance and response was duly made by Miss Mary Wolfard in behalf of the class of '99. Miss Altha Parsons gave a good sketch of "Character," its value and importance, showing that she had given her subject much thought. "American Inventions and Inventors" was well handled by Miss Gladys Hartley. She brought before us the principal inventors, from Watt down to Edison and Bell, and their inventions and their effect upon the progress of mankind. The quartet by Foltz, Logsdon and Bartness Bros. was nicely rendered. The "Present, Past and Future," by S. M. Blowers, was one of the most interesting orations of the evening. It will be published in next week's GLACIER. The valedictory by Fred J. Eckert, jr., was well worded, thanking every one in general for their interest in educational matters; paying tribute to the class instructors and giving a word of encouragement to classmates. His oration on "America" and his manner of delivery promise something better than the ordinary in the future. Misses Mary Wolfard and Gladys Hartley played a very pretty duet on the piano. Rev. J. T. Merrill earnestly addressed the class for ten minutes. B. R. Allard, principal of the school, in a few concise words presented the diplomas to the class. The chorus, "When Clouds are Broken," was well sung. One member of the class, L. C. Baldwin, was absent on account of sickness. This is the second exercise of the kind in Hood River, and the classes of '98 and '99 have established precedents hard to excel.

Sad Life of a Hood River Girl.

NEW WHATCOM, Wash., April 24.—Editor GLACIER: I thought I would drop you a word to let the Hood River folks know how my sister, Fredricka York, is getting along. She fell off the Barrett school-house step when but 9 years old and is now 24. She has been suffering ever since with her hips and arms and is now confined in her bed; never will be able to be out again. Her trouble is now in her back, and the worst of it is she can not hear a word and has not heard for 12 years. This world has been very hard on her, and now she is only waiting for the end to come. She has been thinking she would get back to dear old Hood River once more, but now all her hopes are gone and she has only her sickness and trouble to remember it by. Hood River is a very pretty place, and a prettier place could not be found on the Sound. It makes me homesick when I think of it. Mrs. FLORA HENNES, 1108 Cortina street.
