Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, JUNE 16, 1899.

Hon. Emile Schanno furnished a paper on co-operation of fruit growers to the meeting of fruit men in Salem last week. Mr. Schanno holds up Hood River as an example to be followed by other fruit-growing sections, larger than the original Coxey army This of course is flattering to Hood The idea is to march to Washington on River. We all know here how we could co-operate and hold up prices in to congress. the shipment of our strawberries, but we fail to do it. We all know that if there was but one management in the shipping of our berries that prices could be kept up till the end of the shipping season in every market our berries reach. No other section can compete with Hood River in growing strawberries, and it is left to our growers to compete with each other. When more than one concern is shipping to the same market our berries are bound to come in competition and prices are cut. One shipping concern could control shipments so that no one point would receive any more berries than the demand would justify. We could then establish prices, while now we take what the market offers. These points are side were more rapidly peopled, and so clear to every one that it seems like folly to mention it. It is safe to say that if there was only one shipping concern our berries would this year bring one-third more money to the grower than he will receive. Mr. Schanno save:

Fruit growers in all other states form apples, while many in other parts of the state realized little over 50 cents, and the better price was much more the result of intelligent business methods in disposing of it than in the superiority of the fruits. Other districts may profit by the example of Hood River. I would therefore have the fruit results and from the very first considered this then wilderness a part of it; and they fruit growers of each district or shipping point, as may be most convenient, organize themselves into a union for the marketing and disposal of their product. Let them place the business of shipping and marketing in the hands of an honest, intelligent, progressive management, and the average results will undoubtedly be the best that can be obtained under existing the product. The secure professional transfer of their faults of their conditions. To secure uniformity the fruit should be packed at one place and under the supervision of a competent inspector. Each union should have a memory of that already larger contents. handsome and attractive lable to place on all boxes and packages, and no ef-fort should be spared to make the label a cirtificate of the character and quality of the fruit it marks. Honesty is the best policy in fruit packing as in everything else, and a simple business policy, it has been demonstrated a litousand times that honest, uniform eareful and attractive packing, such as that few bottled preparations excel, can be easily effected through a fruit-growers' union, always pays a hand-some dividend for the extra care and

The Oregon Pioneers.

It is a trite truth that Oregon owes much of its moral, social and financial solidity and sedateness to the character of the pioneers who hewed out here the foundations for a state. They were sturdy, sober, resolute men, whose slow but sure habits and methods have state. The commonwealths on either next. largely by men with less steadiness of strawberries plentiful and cheap purpose and solidity of character. Most of the old Oregonians came hither simply for a home, which they expected and did make for themselves by long years of toil. There was no speculative fever in their blood; they had combinations for marketing their fruit, and the result has always been better prices for the producer. The fruit growers of Hood River valley, through their Fruit Growers' Union, get better prices for their apples and berries than any other locality in the state. I know of some growers who, through this agency, obtained $2.50 a box for their apples, while many in other parts of their mark deep and broad in its early history.
