The box factory will start up for the fall run in a few days, manufacturing tin-top peach and prune baskets. The factory has several big orders for the same from The Dalles and points east.

The free mail delivery in Hood River seems to fill a long felt want. Winfield Olinger, the carrier, reports a big increase every day in the number of letters delivered as well as those taken up.

H. L. Crapper shipped 500 crates of strawberries from 2 acres. He picked and sold enough besides to pay all expenses of picking. Altogether, he picked about 600 crates from 2 acres of land.

Wm. M. Yates has been reappointed postmaster of Hood River. This time he is appointed by the president for four years, and in a few days will receive his commission, signed by William McKinley.

The man Armstrong, who was picked up in Portland and sent to the small-pox hospital, had the genuine small-pox. He went from Hood River to his home at Dundee, and afterwards went to Portland. His brother at Dundee has since broken out with the disease and the whole town has been quarantined.

Winfield Olinger, who drives the free delivery cart, had a runaway on Monday. His horse started to run while he was delivering mail at Jas. Peak's place. He caught him by the bridle and held on for awhile but was forced to let go. The horse came on to town, smashing the cart on the way, but no mail was lost.

The longer we live the more we learn about farming and strawberry growing. J. C. Boggs had 4 acres in strawberries, from which he picked 614 crates. In every other row he sowed wheat, and after the strawberry crop was taken off he set the mower at work and took off 2 1/2 tons of hay. The mower also trimmed his berry tops. He saved labor in irrigating and cutting tops.

Miss Margaret Campbell, a classmate of Mrs. S. E. Bartmess at Logansport, Indiana, female seminary, gave Mrs. Bartmess a flying visit the first of the week. Miss Campbell is now living in San Francisco. She says Hood River is a delightful place, and she will come next year with some of her friends to spend the summer with us. Cloud Cap Inn will be one of the objective points.

A. S. Dishrow says it pays to take care of strawberry plants by irrigation and cultivation. He had 2 1/2 acres that were neither cultivated nor irrigated; they produced 85 crates. One and one-half acres cared for by himself produced 300 crates. He cultivated last spring by going through once with a horse cultivator and then used the hoe. He cultivated thoroughly in the fall.

Axel Rahm has leased his farm to Gatchel Bros. for three years. Mr. and Mrs. Rahm will leave Hood River for a change of climate for Mrs. Rahm, who has not been well for some time. The good wishes of many friends accompany them wherever they may locate.

Mrs. S. A. Hutton has supplied most of the canary birds that delight the ladies of Hood River with their songs. For more than 20 years Mrs. Hutton has raised a crop of singing canaries, and this year she has had her usual good luck with the songsters.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Whitecomb came up from Portland last week.

Decision Affecting Hood River.

The case of the Hood River Lumbering Co. vs. Wasco County, in the supreme court, was decided Monday in favor of the Hood River Lumbering Co. The decision holds that the act passed by the legislature in 1889, entitled "An act authorizing the county courts of the several counties of this state to declare un navigable stream highways for the floating of logs and timber, and provide for the improvement and use of the same," is unconstitutional so far as it authorizes the taking of private property for public use without due process of law. Therefore, the condemnation proceedings as made by the county court, allowing the Whitans $2,000 for their land at the mouth of Hood river, and sustained by Judge Bradshaw of the circuit court, are declared void, and the situation stands as it did before the county court granted the Hood River Lumbering Co. a lease of the river as a public highway. As a review of the whole case has not been given, it is not known whether or not the whole act of the legislature of February 25, 1885, is declared unconstitutional, and if not, the county court may again declare Hood river a public highway and lease the river to any company for the floating of logs, provided the riparian rights of settlers along the banks of the river are secured. The decision of Judge Bean of the supreme court, as given in the Oregonian, declares the act unconstitutional inasmuch as there is no provision in the law for serving notice to the land owners of the taking of their property and appropriating it to a public use and giving them an opportunity to defend as a matter of right.
