Two of the heifers are not quite two years old and the other not three years old. Besides the butter made, the three calves take a large portion of the milk. One of the cows is a full-blooded Jersey and the other two grade Jerseys. This is a fine record for these heifers, and gives an idea what may be expected of them when they attain the age of maturity, or come to their best at 6 or 7 years old. Mr. Koberg will soon be milking about ten cows and will then purchase a separator. He is getting plenty of eggs from his 200 hens.

Some two months ago a party of sev-eral families who had been renters in Hood River thought to better their condition by moving to Western Oregon.
Two of the men folks, E. C. Copper and
Daniel Garbrant, went to Junction City,
Lane county, and from thence to the lower Siuslaw, 70 miles from Junction City, where they located government land in a locality they thought would be good for stock raising and hunting. They reported good ranges and plenty of deer and bear. They then returned to Hood River and got ready to move to their new home. Two other families went with them. Arrived at Junction City, one family and several of the young uslaw, while the rest remained. The reports brought back were not encouraging. The road led over hills and gulches for 70 miles, and part of that distance there was no road. The women of the party rehelled and refused to go so far out of eivilization. This of course put a stop to going further, and the dreams of the means of the men wherein they could see pioneer life in log cabins, with an easy time fishing and hunting, were dashed away, and the stern condition of how to provide for their families during the coming with the stern condition of how to provide for their families during the coming with the stern condition of low was the was not to be had at more than 75 cents a day.
