

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1899.

Bishop Potter and Dr. Rufus W. Clark of Detroit were among the speakers at the Episcopal church congress at St. Paul. Bishop Potter, as is well known, is an avowed anti-expansionist, and his addresses are listened to with the respect which his words always command. He is reported as saying: "It is possible that a nation which still preserves the forms of democratic government may in time subordinate them to methods of its administration which sooner or later will bring the substance of imperialism along with them." This is the danger which he apparently apprehends in the Philippines, where, he adds, America's "first word is submission, its first demand, surrender, its first, second, and third conditions are, 'We will recognize nobody, we will treat with nobody, we alone will dictate all the terms.'" As an honorable alternative, he proposes that "we submit to an international court, representing the best wisdom of the best peoples, the question of the present disposition and future administration of the Philippines." Dr. Clark, on the other hand, insists that expansion "does not rest without qualification upon the principles of personal liberty. It rests upon the principle of the largest good to the greatest number," a contention which he confirms by citation from our past history.

Evidently everything is not serenely pleasant for the imperialistic members of the Canadian cabinet. The British government asked for a contingent of 500 troops from Canada to aid the English in South Africa, and the Canadian government was going to send 2,000, until Mr. Tarte, minister of public works, threatened to resign if such a force was sent. Mr. Tarte declared that the participation of Canada in one of England's foreign entanglements was a phase of imperialism which French Canadians would not tolerate. A compromise was reached and Canada will send 1,000 men.

The season for tree planting has again arrived. Hood River fruit growers will plant a good many apple trees this fall. It is a good plan, when buying trees, to go to the nursery and see them taken from the ground—see that they have good roots. A two-year-old tree is best to plant if it has good roots and is carefully dug from the nursery row. A yearling tree is more easily dug to save all the roots, and for this reason it is preferred by many to two-year-olds.

The British sustained a severe defeat in a battle with the Boers at Ladysmith last Tuesday. Two battalions of British troops and a battery were lured to a part of the field and captured after being cut to pieces. Losses on both sides were heavy. The situation looks gloomy for the English and they may have to retreat or surrender before reinforcements can reach them. The Boers are putting up a good fight. "Thrice armed is he whose cause is right."

Indiana was the great volunteer state during the civil war. It put 236,000 men into the field, and it can be said that no other state in the Union spilled so much blood and participated in so many bloody engagements. Indiana's war history is written in letters of crimson on the soil of seventeen states. It furnished the first and last soldier to lay down his life in that war—a member of the 7th, at Philipp, in 1861, and a member of the 34th, at Palm Beach, Mexico, May 12, 1865.

It is a common belief among strawberry growers that prices will be good next season, and extra efforts have been made to cultivate the plants and set out new patches this fall. Thrifty plants set out even at this date will make a crop next year that will go a good way towards paying for the work of setting and cultivating.

Ranch and Range says the demand for hay on the Sound is now very great and local dealers find it almost impossible to fill orders. The price has risen a good high jump and an average of $10 is now being paid for Paget sound hay that sold for $6 and $7 a few weeks ago, and even then was in little demand.

The new populist editor of the Sun got out a very creditable issue this week, the best that has appeared. But his editorial page was devoted chiefly to the financial, and of course he had a good subject.

It is said that much butter is now on the market which has been churned and worked without the use of water to wash out the buttermilk. The flavor is said to be fine and the keeping qualities good.

Great Britain has about 36,000 soldiers in the Transvaal, with probably 100,000 reinforcements on the way. The forces of the Boers are estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000 men.

Boys and Girls' Aid Society.
Supt. Gardner of the Boys and Girls' Aid Society of Oregon, was in town Saturday, being here for the purpose of visiting wards of the society placed out in this vicinity, of whom there are quite a number. He says he has found them to be in excellent homes. The society Mr. Gardner represents is under the direction of some of the leading men of the city of Portland, as follows: H. W. Corbett, president; F. E. Beach, secretary; J. L. Hawkins, treasurer; Judge C. B. Williams, Dr. T. L. Eliot, A. G. Breyman, Mrs. W. A. Buchanan and Mrs. Levi White. The objects of the society are to rescue homeless, neglected or abused children of the state, to care for such until suitable homes or employment are found for them, and thereafter to continue a systematic oversight of their condition and treatment. The society also receives juvenile offenders who may be in danger of being imprisoned or sent to the reform school under section 1414 of the annotated laws of Oregon, if, after investigation, they find that such youth have not departed from the path of virtue. Mr. Gardner says he wishes it distinctly understood that this class of children does not embrace the class known as fallen girls.

The society is maintained by state and county aid, by the interest of the Home, and by voluntary contributions. About one-half the expenses are paid by the latter.

The superintendent while here was the guest of Capt. A. S. Blowers. He further says that it has been stated by business men of Hood River that a person has been canvassing for subscriptions from time to time, and many people here have been led to believe that it was for the Boys and Girls' Aid Society. This is entirely wrong. Although the society has taken many homeless or abused children from this county, they have never asked nor received one cent from any person in Hood River.

The society completely covers the work of the rescue children all over the state of Oregon and never refuses to care for any case reported and sent to the Home. No red tape is required; to know that a child is in need is sufficient and cases should be reported to the county judge or commissioners.

There are now on hand at the Home in Portland about 57 children, 29 of whom are boys and 17 girls. The boys range in age from 2 to 14 years, and the girls from 8 to 15 years. Besides the above, the society has under its care a boy baby of excellent parentage aged 7 months. All the above children are for adoption or indenture, and any person wishing to obtain one of them should address the superintendent of the Boys and Girls' Aid Society at Portland.

Mr. Gardner would like to get the pupils of the public schools interested in the society's children and on Thanksgiving bring to the school some small articles of provisions or clothing, which, after being gathered together, will be forwarded by the principal to the Home. This a twofold object will be secured—a grand lesson of charity taught the children and aid to those who can not help themselves.

Mr. Gardner will visit all towns between here and Baker City where any of the society's wards are placed. The society places on an average 25 children each month, or 300 a year.

Planer Notes.
The new trimmer is in operation and does nice work, with J. O. Eastman at the wheel.

J. O. Eastman laid off Tuesday on account of the sickness of his little boy Roy.

Mr. Helms, one of the planer crew, took a trip to Portland last week to attend the exposition. He spent four days visiting relatives in the city and returned to work Monday.

The contract has been let to build three more houses at the planer.

Mrs. Gillis Hubbard's death is the first to occur at the planer. Gillis is a steady worker and has the sympathy of the entire force.

O. R. & N. are pushing the work of straightening their track at this point, and great changes will be made here within the next few weeks.

The store building is nearing completion. We will soon have a place to trade near home.

Business never was better than it has been the past month. We have been rushed almost every day.

Mark Davenport's genial phiz was in evidence at the planer last Tuesday. Mark is doing good work on the irrigating flume, using a large amount of lumber.

The Unappreciated Hen.

There are many reasons why the hen and not the eagle should be the national bird. Among them is the growing discontent our best citizens feel for the eagle, which bird has never given thorough satisfaction, because of its low down nature. The eagle is a cowardly creature and never makes war except upon weaker things. It never earned an honest dollar in its life, and its daily food is stolen from some poor bird too small and too weak to defend itself and its property, says the Chicago News.

Another single swoop down among children, lambs and other innocent things, and bears them to its home, among the mountain crags. This alone is sufficient to oust it from the position of being the bird of America and prevent its picture from continuing on our dollars. The hen, however, is a sweet-tempered, hard working, productive creature. She is identified with our home life and our domestic and national prosperity. She lays 200,000,000 worth of eggs every year, or four and a fraction eggs for each individual in the land.

When the eagle is loafing around, waiting to steal something to eat, the modest hen is attending to business. And after a life of activity, laying eggs, cackling, and laying more eggs and hatching little chicks, she gives up her life that the American boarding house may thrive and wax fat. How much better the hen than the bald-headed eagle for our national bird. As a just recognition of her supremacy in the money producing industries she should displace the eagle. The domestic side of her life long since endeared her to every home in the Union. Calm, gentle, somewhat coy, and nevertheless, a strong, courageous, uncompromising bird to all that the eagle is. We hope to see her wings stamped in our moneys and become the national bird of freedom.

Wild Geese Lost in a Storm.

The Baker City Republican tells of the advent of the wild geese last week as follows:

It was evident that the geese had become lost in the storm while searching for their feeding ground, and attracted by the lights of the brilliantly illuminated city, were unable to get away from it, as a heavy hail and a wild rattle-snake, their wings soon packed with the heavy snow, and exhausted beyond endurance, they commenced dropping from the clouds into the street, the noise of their spouting being almost deafening. Then commenced a wild scramble, and boys joined in the sport. Geese or brants were picked up on every side alive, and it was noticed that amongst the game birds were all kinds of birds known to Oregon, that have been mixed up with the geese. Boys went out on the hills and built bonfires, which attracted some of the birds to them, and they secured a dozen more that way. Others took their shot-guns and killed a large number.

Sued the County.

Henry Gardner, through his attorneys, Moore & Gavin, has begun an action for damages against Wasco county for injuries sustained while traveling on a county road near Fifteen Mile creek last winter. In his complaint he alleges that he was coming down a grade on Dec. 21, 1898, with a loaded wagon, when, because of the bad condition of the road, the axle of the wagon broke, and he was thrown from the wagon, and thereby he sustained injuries that will be permanent. He therefore demands damages in the sum of $6,500. It will be remembered that Mr. Gardner and Mrs. Reese were coming to The Dalles when the accident occurred, and that Mrs. Reese was killed while Mr. Gardner had an arm broken and sustained other serious injuries.—Mountaineer.

H. M. Prindle and wife of Mt. Hood went to The Dalles Wednesday.

Little Jimmie Wickham was reported quite sick Wednesday.

Geo. Noland, Rockland, O., says, "My wife died after 45 years. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured her. It is the best salve in America. It heals everything and cures all skin diseases. Williams & Brosius."

Supt. C. L. Gilbert returned Saturday night from a visit to the various schools throughout the county. When asked how their condition pleased him, he spoke very flattering concerning the success attained by the teachers. Although looking much better, Mr. Gilbert found the riding very tiresome, particularly so as the riding jags his hip, which has not yet recovered from the fall received some time since.—Chronicle.

Dr. W. Wilson, Italy Hill, N.Y., says, "I heartily recommend One Minute Cough Cure. It gave my wife immediate relief in suffering asthma." Please to take. Never fail to get it. Cures all coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. Williams & Brosius.

The supreme court has affirmed the decision of Judge Bradshaw in the suit of Levi and Karis Jones against the Oregon Lumber Co. The supreme court opinion concludes, after stating the difficulty in deciding the case, owing to the different statements, as follows: "The testimony of plaintiff's (Oregon Lumber Co's) witnesses, in our judgment, answers every requirement of the law, is unimpeached, and hence it follows the decree is affirmed."

"I wouldn't be without DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for any consideration," writes Thos. B. Rhodes, Centerfield, O. Infallible for piles, cuts, burns and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. Williams & Brosius.

Senator McBride is in Portland, stopping at the Imperial. He will start for Washington soon.

Dr. H. H. Haden, Summit, Ala., says, "I think Kadol Dyspepsia Cure is a splendid medicine. I prescribe it, and my confidence in it grows with continued use." It digests what you eat and quickly cures dyspepsia and indigestion. Williams & Brosius.

Taking the Census.

Notwithstanding the law, there were many who seriously objected during the last census to giving any information in regard to their personal affairs, and in many instances it was only with great difficulty that the desired facts were obtained. Some misguided individuals barricaded their doors and treated the census-takers in the light of villains who were seeking to rob them of their possessions, and not infrequently a poor census taker (or "enumerator," as he is officially called) was hustled out-of-doors by the indignant woman of the house, old she was or whether she knew how to write. This unwillingness to answer questions would no doubt be overcome if it were known that the replies are intended only for official use in preparing statistics and will never be given out to the public. In fact, the law expressly provides that if any enumerator shall so far forget his duty as to communicate to any one except his superior officer any information he obtains in the performance of his work, he shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars. The law is very strict with reference to the duties of the enumerators, for unless this work is done properly and carefully the census figures would be of little value. Consequently, every one who undertakes that if he shall knowingly make a false statement regarding the persons whom he has enumerated, either as to their number or any facts relating to them in any possible way, he shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction he may be fined five thousand dollars and imprisoned for two years.

A Battle-Scarred Flag.

The Woodburn Independent is responsible for this story about the banner that the Second Oregon carried to victory in the Philippines.

The Second Oregon regiment flag was in only one engagement, and that not a serious one, at Pasig. In the march through brush and in other battles the emblem was not taken as it was considered too much bother. Yet when the flag was turned over to Governor Geer in Portland it was rent with bullets. Tattered and torn, it presented the appearance of having gone through a ten years' war. While civilians beheld the Stars and Stripes in shreds, through tear-be-dimmed eyes, and whined at the terrible story which the words, the returned volunteer gazed in amazement at the Second Oregon's flag and silently wondered "what had struck it?"

Planting of the Apple Tree.

BY WILLIAM EULIN HERVANT.
Come, let us plant the apple tree,
Cleave the tough groundward with the spade,
Boys, secure the roots, and there
Then gently lay the roots, and there
Sift the dark mold with kindly care,
And press it so that it is true,
As round the sleeping infant's feet,
We softly plant the apple tree.
So that the apple tree

What plant we in this apple tree
Buds, which the breath of summer days
Shall lengthen into juicy sprays,
When the dew drops with crimson beads
Small haunts and sing and hide her nest;
We plant upon the sunny side
A shadow for the mountain bird,
A shelter from the summer shower,
When we plant the apple tree.

What plant we in this apple tree
Sweets for a hundred flowers spring
To load the May wind's restless wings,
When from the orchard's open doors
Flowers of the sweetest perfume
For the glad infant's apron of bloom,
We plant with the apple tree.

What plant we in this apple tree
Fruits that shall smile in the sun of June,
And redder in the August sun,
And drop a benediction from above,
When the sick girl's silent room,
For the glad infant's apron of bloom,
We plant with the apple tree.

While children come with cries of glee,
And seek them where the fragrant grass
Reveals their bed to those who see,
At the foot of the apple tree.
