Tragedy at Trout Lake.

The startling intelligence reached Hood River Monday of the death of Miss Ida Foss at Trout Lake at the hands of Ben Wagnitz. Miss Foss was teaching school at Trout Lake and boarded out cost to yourselves. at the house of Mrs. Wagnitz. Sunday evening, May 20th, Miss Foss and Ben Wagnitz were left alone in the house, while the young man's mother and brother were at the corral milking. Upon their return to the house they found young Wagnitz lying dead in the yard and Miss Foss dead in the house. Investigation showed that the young woman had been shot through the heart and that Wagnitz picked her up, laid her on a bed, examined her wound, covered it with cloths and the body with a blanket, and then went outside the house and shot himself. It is supposed the young couple had had a lover's quarrel, but no one was present, and no one knows the real cause of the tragedy nor how it happened.

Miss Foss was born and raised in Hood River, where her parents reside. She was an educated and accomplished young woman, and the news of her awful death cast a gloom over the whole community.

Ben Wagnitz was a young man, 26 years old, generally respected in the community at Trout Lake, where he had lived for years. He was a mountain guide at Mt. Adams, and when at home made himself useful by helping his mother on the ranch.

The funeral of Miss Foss was held from the residence of S. E. Bartmess, Wednesday, and was attended by a large concourse of the friends of the young woman and the family.

HOOD RIVER, May 22, 1900 .- Editor GLACIER: The rural postal delivery in Hood River valley is beyond the experimental stage. Since it was established last year, more than thirty families have been added to the list of patrons. The number of pieces collected has increased at the rate of about five hundred per month with the addition of facilities for the registration of letters and packages and the sale of stamps, the patrons en-joy conveniences equal to suburban dis-tricts of the cities.

A further benefical result of the establishment of the system is the improvements in the highways used on the Much credit is due the road supervisors for their efforts in this direction, and the thanks of the community are eminently due to Hon. M. A. Moody, who was chiefly instrumental in securing to Hood River, from among many applicants, the selection as a point of operation, and who has used all needed efforts to make the temporary effort a success and to establish it permanently.

the words with which John G. Wooley opened his address at The Dalles. That one sentence embodies the battle cry of the temperance crusade. It is a proposition implying both guilt and duty. The noxious weeds of the fields ought to as follows: The noxious weeds of the fields ought to die. They deteriorate your vegetables, deprive the soil of its fertility, and lessen the harvest. Accordingly, you pass judgment upon them. They offer no apology for their existence, and so you impose the penalty of death. But you will have to kill them. Nature has made you the executioner of the laws essential to the highest productiveness of the physical kingdom. It is not dif-ferent in the moral realm. The ethical life of man resolves itself into virtue, duty and good. Virtue is the fountain, duty the means, and good the effect in the actualization of life. Upon duty the actualization of life. Upon duty hinges the outward expression of every moral triumph. We need power to bear the outflowings of virtue to the goal of the good. Duty is the medium by which power is applied. It appeals to us (1) as outward law or command, then (2) going beyond the mere letter of the law, the voice of conscience is heard, and lastly (3) our action is controlled by and lastly (3) our action is controlled by freedom. And thus, when the "thou shalt" of the first and second becomes the "I will" of the third, duty becomes transfigured until it achieves the glory which lights up the historic page with heroic grandeur and noble deeds of valor. The liquor traffic is guilty of crime, and it is my duty to kill it, are the two thoughts I wish to present. The liquor traffic robs man of his reason. The intemperate man loses self-control, against reason, resigns his rank among plimentary vote in Hood River from God's rational creatures and becomes a friends who are not particularly interbrute, it is natural and proper and ben-eficial to society at large that he shall stand, a monument of wrath, forever exhibiting the handwriting of judgment a great sufferer from muscular rheumaand we and a constant teacher of what it means to destroy reason. When I go to the poorhouses and penal institutions of the thickly settled states, as I have frequently done, and see the burden of thousands of dollars laid upon the community, I feel the tremendous guilt of the liquor traffic as nowhere else. Yet I wish that it were more, that the burden might become so heavy that we should ask in alarm: "How may we be saved?" The liquor traffic robs man of his genius Programme for Memorial Services.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in cur-ing the diseases which cause coughing.
