

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1900.

If the United States should declare war on China, the 150,000 Chinese residents of this country would, according to international law, have to leave the borders of the United States within thirty days after a declaration of war. In case of war the Chinese ambassador at Washington would receive his passport, and his intercourse with this government would end until hostilities ceased, as in the case of Spain. The minister would thereupon notify the consuls of his government in every city of the United States, telling them that he had received his passport and ordering them to collect together the subjects of his government, notifying them that within thirty days they must leave the territory. International law would require that the Chinese be deported at the expense of their home country, but as China has no ships her countrymen would have to be transported on ships hired from nations with whom she would likely be at war. However, they would be protected on the ocean and allowed to reach their port within any reasonable time after thirty days from the time of leaving the United States. What would be done with those who could not get back to China is a question that would have to be decided later.

In the Cuban municipal elections, June 10th, the first in which the electors of the island participated since the overthrow of Spanish authority, only one-third of those entitled to vote exercised their right of suffrage. The franchise, by order of American authorities, was limited to males above 21 years of age who could read or write, or who had property valued at $250, with an exception granting suffrage to veterans of the Cuban army. In the city of Havana, there were about 60,000 men entitled to vote. Of these, 26,000 registered, but only 19,000 took interest enough in the election to go to the polls and vote.

All the amendments to the state constitution voted on at the late election were defeated. The equal suffrage amendment received 26,295 to 28,402 cast against it. A dispatch to the Oregonian from Salem says: "A blank count a 'no' vote according to the construction here given, so that while the equal suffrage amendment, at first thought, seems to be defeated by only 2,137 votes, when the total number of votes cast in the state shall have been ascertained, it will appear that the amendment has been lost by about 2 to 1."

W. H. H. Dufur, forest supervisor, offers a reward of $150 for the arrest and conviction of anyone starting fires in the Cascade forest reserve that causes damage. Mr. Dufur and his efficient corps of forest rangers have been of great service in preventing forest fires. One year of their work has proven the wisdom of creating the forest reserves and giving them protection. Last year, for the first time in the history of Oregon, there were no fires in the mountains and the atmosphere was free from smoke.

A reader of the New York Independent offers the following explanation of the meaning of the word "Boxers": The "Boxers" or "Righteousness and Peace First Society" as they have been called, represent the periodical revolt of Chinese conservatism against the influx of foreign influence and foreign methods. They originated with the people of the western provinces, largely in Shantung, who looked ahead as they saw foreigners coming in and taking by force what they considered their own patrimony.

The Philadelphia convention renominated President McKinley and induced Gov. Roosevelt to accept the nomination for vice president. The democrats will nominate next week at Kansas City.

State Encampment G. A. R. and W. R. C.
The editor of the GLACIER attended the state encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at La Grande, last week. It was his first trip to that part of Oregon, and he was agreeably surprised to find such a delightful country as the Grand Ronde valley. The town of La Grande put on its best and loveliest and gave the veterans and the loyal women of the W. R. C. a hearty welcome. The town was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, their fine band furnished an abundance of music, and there was base ball and other games to interest and amuse the guests. The reception committee, however, proved a flat failure. It failed to show up at the depot Monday evening, when most of the delegates arrived. But several citizens interested themselves and piloted the strangers to the hotels and private houses where rooms had been assigned them. The hotels and some of the private boarding houses that had promised one-dollar-a-day rates put up the price to two dollars a day. But very few of the old soldiers allowed that kind of a job to be played on them; they skirmished round till they found quarters in private houses at one dollar a day, and were well treated. The heavy stables also attempted a graft and showed up at their price, but they were not patronized by the strangers within the city. The encampment, though few in numbers, was one of the best ever held in the state. It was a business encampment, and much work was accomplished for the good of the order. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:
State Department Commander—A. J. Goodbrod of Union.
Senior Vice Commander—B. F. Pike of Moro.
Junior Vice Commander—Wm. Bates of Portland.
Medical Director—H. I. Buell.
Department Chaplain—C. E. Cline.
Assistant Adjutant General—J. E. Mayo of Portland.
Members of Council of Administration—Patrick Colbert, J. R. Warner, J. H. Williams, E. T. Boers, T. S. Henderson.
Delegates to National Encampment at Chicago—H. S. Allan, M. Hathaway, J. N. Panake.
The W. R. C. elected officers as follows:
Department President—Mrs. Clara V. Lyle, La Grande.
Senior Vice Department President—Mrs. Sargent, Portland.
Junior Vice Department President—Mrs. Anderson, Forest Grove.

Treasurer—Mrs. Aldrich, La Grande.
Secretary—Mrs. Rose Tate, La Grande.
Chaplain—Mrs. Smede, Heppner.
Executive Board—Mrs. Dewey, Portland; Mrs. Finney, Hillsboro; Mrs. Dolan, Portland; Mrs. Swan, Lebanon; Mrs. Oiler, Portland.
Members—Mrs. Galloway, Oregon City.
Delegates—Mrs. Kelly, Heppner; Mrs. I. N. Panake, Pine.

The GLACIER man went as far as Baker City on his trip. In this metropolis of the Eastern Oregon gold fields he found several old-time acquaintances, among them L. B. Bowen, one of the editors and proprietors of the Daily Morning Democrat. The Democrat is the leading newspaper of Eastern Oregon, and Messrs. Bowen & Small, who have been associated together in its publication for thirteen years, have a business that pays a handsome income.
Fred Ernest, another old-timer, was met. Mr. Ernest is proprietor of the St. Lawrence hotel, one of the best-paying institutions of its kind in the state. Fred knows how to run a hotel. He is coming back with the old Occidental hotel in Portland, when that was the leading hotel of the Northwest, and is known by all old-timers.

NOTES.
Mrs. A. E. Curtis was a delegate from the W. R. C. of Geo. Wright post, Portland.
Mrs. E. P. Mathews was met on the cars, accompanied by her little girl, aged 15 months. Her husband is in charge of the bridge builders at Huron, on the O. R. & N. Mrs. Mathews is in excellent health. She inquired after friends at Hood River.
Former Hood River residents were met everywhere, or inquiries were made after Hood River people.

Romance in a Strawberry Box.
Helena Independent.
There is a chance down in Oregon for some young Montana man who wants a wife without the intermeddling of a soulless matrimonial agency. And if this reaches the eye of any desirable young man who is matrimonially inclined there will, mayhap, be a sequel to write with a title something like "The Romance of a Strawberry Box." Such things have happened before. When the stories come from the east, they are as a rule brought out by little "box" writers on cigarette papers that found their way in to the lands of the right parties. But there is something about young men who are in the way of receiving notes written on that material that takes half the romance out of the thing to begin with.

The romance of the strawberry box, however, has no drawbacks. While the succulent fruit is ripening on the vine and is being packed in boxes down in the valley of the Hood, the girls who are doing the packing are yearning for the young men of other states. In a box that came to a Helena grocery yesterday was written in lead pencil the following dainty bit of verse:
Lizzie is my name
Umbrella is my station,
The boy that answers this shall be
My nearest relation.
The name of the author is appended, as an evidence of good faith, and her address is Hood River, Or. Lizzie does not say whether the edition of her production is limited, or whether she has sent it broadcast, hit or miss, in a sort of drag net style, and so the young man who expects to win will do well to answer quickly, trusting to no fluke fortune to deprive him of a prize so rare.
