When, at 8:25 A. M., the second officer, to use his own phrase, "heard the rush of a steamer's bows," he shouted down to the captain, who rushed on deck, but he was too late to give an order. The Capmania was under one-third steam. The captain, first officer and pilot were on the bridge. The engines were instantly reversed, and the helm put hard down. No precaution was omitted. Some of her passengers had even grambled at what they called superfluous caution. After the crash and the sudden cries, the boats were quickly gotten out. There were no signs of panic; the crew was everywhere at their stations; the bulkheads were closed and everything possible was done to save life. Some of the Campania's plates were bent by the collision; her forepeak filled with water; her foretopmast was broken short off and her steel rigging torn and twisted. The passengers held a meeting, adopted resolutions of thanks to the captain and crew, and subscribed £700 for the relief of the survivors and the families

After his capture by the rioters, missionary was stripped by the retinue of Li and a collar of iron fastened to confront the Chinese, and the rising ish yoke the peoples under it, and we and he was tethered to a stake. The Chinese men, women and children then poked sharp sticks into his flesh and jabbed him with tridents. When he sank down, weak with the loss of blood and half crazed by the awful torture, and was unable to get upon his knees even, the chain being too short, he strangled slowly. Molten lead was then thrown on his nude body and as he writhed in agony, he was stabbed to death. His body was cut to pieces. Robnson, the other mssionary, was slaugthered without being so long in agony. He was cut down by a mob and hacked to peces almost instantly. A number of the mission converts were slaughtered. Some were asked to re cant and those who did so to save their lives were saddled and bridled and
