

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1900.

Hood River Fair.
The fair building was completed last Saturday, and Monday the benches for the display of Hood River's products were put in. The structure is covered entirely with heavy canvas that makes everything secure from rain, and the canvas roof affords good light to the interior. The building is 112 feet long and 40 feet wide. The exhibits will be placed on the sides. A passage way about five feet wide divides the booths from the tables. Visitors will pass in at the right and keep going one way till they make the circuit of the building. In the center of the building is the auditorium, 20 feet wide the length of the building, excepting the space taken up by the stage at the east end. Seats will be provided in the auditorium for entertainments on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Judge Henry, chairman of the hall committee, has been untiring in looking after every detail of the construction of the building. In fact he was the only member of the committee that offered any assistance. The different members happened to be too busy with their own private affairs to devote any time to the public, however willing they might have been to help with their labor.

The price of admission is 10 cents, or 25 cents for a season ticket.

The reception committee are requested to be on hand early Friday morning, and to appoint from their number a delegation to meet trains and boats to receive guests to the fair.

Letter from the Philippines.

Tautuan, Batangar Province, P. I., Aug. 1, 1900.—Dear Relatives: As I lie here on my bed, with a high fever and knocked out in general, I will take time to tell you a little of my experience in the last two months. My first month in Tautuan passed away without any great event. Every day I have done duty up till today, on guard or on a hike.

Do you know what hiking is? At any rate you don't know what it is here, so I will tell you. Imagine yourselves as soldiers coming off a 24-hour guard at 8:30 a. m. and at 9 a. m., with three days' rations in your haversacks, a poncho, canteen full of water, gun and 100 rounds of ammunition in your belt, going on a march, quick time (as fast as you can walk) in until 3 o'clock in the afternoon without stopping. At 3 you sit down, eat the contents of a can marked salmon (which you have to hold with your fork half the time to keep it from running away, it is so strong), and half a dozen hard tack half the time soaked with muddy water, and you are awful lucky if you can get a cup of coffee; start out again at 4 o'clock, and nine chances out of ten hike all night. But sometimes you stop when it gets so dark you can't see your hand in front of your face, spread your poncho (which is little better than a rag) out on the ground and enjoy life. No ants no mosquitoes; oh no! you arise in the morning refreshed and happy, so happy you don't really care if you never see the states again. Well, you monkey along all day and maybe find a nigger who looks like to take him in town get in town in time to go on guard the next day. So goes our life in this beautiful country. When we go on a short hike, maybe only 10 or 12 hours, we all have a good time—steal eggs and kill chickens and then have something to eat.

Of late the niggers have been getting pretty sassy around town, and we've ago we were waked in the night by call to arms. We got up and put on our clothes and got our belts and picked up our guns and went down stairs on the jump. The bullets were going ping, ping, ping; zip, zip, zip! They came through our barracks. We went down and lined up against the wall. We waited till about daylight and then went in. Nothing happened. The next day went on a hike. We rounded up twelve young hombies and got to work. We tied their hands behind their backs and made them kneel down in a row. We then lined up and filled our chamber and magazines. The captain called the interpreter and told him to tell the prisoners to give up their guns, or rather where their guns were hidden, in one minute or they would be dead men. The captain said to "Don't fire till I give the command, 'aim!'" We waited till we were tired. Just before the time was up one of the hombies jumped up and told where his gun was; the others soon followed, and at the last tick of the minute every hombie followed and we got the rifles, Mausers and Remingtons, 500 rounds of ammunition and a lot of bolos. Sometimes we use another method. Get an hombie between 18 and 35 years of age and lay him on the ground; pry his mouth open with a bayonet, hold his nose and pour water into his ears. We tell him through the interpreter that when he wants to be canteled up where his gun is, and we don't stop till he does. It very seldom fails to get all he knows out of him. Sometimes it fails, and he dies the death of a man who is drowned. It seems cruel, but it isn't. You are not here and don't know what these people are. The more I can make "good amigoes" the better I will be satisfied. They take an American prisoner and begin with a bolo, cut his scalp into strips, cut off his fingers, lance his nose, cut off his fingers at every joint, then at the wrist, then the toes in the same manner; cut feet and arms off, then put ropes around the stumps and unjoint the legs, do, do, until you are dead. I love them as much as I love onion or pole cats. I used to pity them when I was in Manila, but my heart has gone to stone. One man in my company has experienced the death I have just spoken of, and every man has made a promise to avenge his death. Our brave and good quartermaster, Notrie, died fighting like a hero. That he was, while the rest, with the exception of one who was taken prisoner, retreated. The man who staid was court martialed, the others were given awards of merit. I did not hear the straight of that story until I got to my own company. I began this letter on the first of August, it is now the tenth. I was taken sick and could not finish it then, but I am well now.

When you cannot sleep for coughing, it is hardly necessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by Williams & Brosius.

For killing an Oregon robin, Gus Danego, a Frenchman, was fined $100 and sentenced to 7 1/2 days in jail. The punishment inflicted is heavy, but the officials are determined to stop the killing of harmless birds.—Telegram.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by Williams & Brosius.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. E. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what good preparation could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial she did not find it worth the money for being back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by Williams & Brosius.

Jas. E. Hanna's store building is nearing completion. It will make quite a roomy store room.
