Robert H. Wilson, special agent of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society of Portland, was in Hood River last Saturday. While here he visited several homes where children have been placed by the society and found the children well cared for. The Boys' and Girls' and Girls' and Girls' are members of the club, to secure these extraordinary low prices the order must pass through the secretary's hands for his endorsement, showing that party ordering is a member of the club. Several of our members have bought both eggs and fowls of Mr. Garrison in years Aid Society is a voluntary association, looking to the public for funds to support its good work. Its aims are to resput homeless, neglected or abused children of Oregon, receive juvenile offenders who are in danger of being imprisoned and provide for such until suitable homes or employment can be found for them. The secretary's report for last year shows that cases involving 1,103 children were investigated, of which number 61 girls and 57 boys were taken charge of and were cared for by the society. For the year ending May 1, 1900, 380 children were received by the society, and homes were found for 376. Aid Society is a voluntary association, clety, and homes were found for 376. you save enough money to pay your membership fees for three years; this is a combination that is hard to beat. The society is ably managed and its membership consists of the best people of the state. Gifts of money clething, fruit, canned goods, vegerables, etc., for the use of the children, are always thankfully received by the management, and there is no more worthy institution asking the patronage of the charitably disposed. Mr. Wilson appointed as acombination that is hard to beat. There are many things Mr Garrison said to us that the members would do well to remember and I would be glad to repeat here but it would take up too much space. I must beg to mention one or two, however. He said, among other things, and wisely, too, not to attempt to handle too many birds at one time, nor too many breeds at once.
