

Wood River Glacier.
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1900.

The Daily Oregonian of Dec. 4th is an interesting number. It prints a fac-simile of its first issue, Dec. 4, 1850. This anniversary number is replete with history and anecdote relating to the early days of the paper. H. L. Pitcock has been manager and principal owner of the Oregonian for 40 years. H. W. Scott first became editor in 1864, and, excepting the years from 1872 to 1877, has since been editor in chief. All connected with this great paper may well be proud of its record.

The Boers may be whipped but they are not yet conquered. An English garrison of 400, with two pieces of artillery, surrendered to the Boer General Dewet only last week. Dewet has an army of 2,500 mounted troops, and with no lines of communication to guard, can make quick marches and harass the English at unexpected points. Other Boer generals have like commands. It looks as if the 200,000 British troops will be needed in the Transvaal for a long time to come.

The Daily Times-Mountaineer has ceased publication till times get better for newspapers in The Dalles. The Weekly Times-Mountaineer will continue under the able editorial management of the proprietor, J. A. Douthit. The many friends of Mr. Douthit will hope the day is not far off when he can resume publication of the daily.

Portland will have no big exposition in 1902. An appropriation by congress for an exposition might interfere with needed appropriations for rivers and harbors, and for this reason many citizens of Portland oppose the holding of the exposition.

When Mark Hanna spoke at Fort Wayne, Ind., during the late campaign, an old lady of that town had a pot of pigs feet cooking on the fire. She left the cooking in charge of her husband while she went about her other duties. When the hand commenced playing the husband went off to hear Mark Hanna's speech, forgetting the pigs feet, and the savory dish was burned and spoiled. A neighbor of the old lady made a bill for $2 for the loss of the pigs feet and sent it to Hanna as if coming from the loser of the pigs feet. Recently the old lady received a check for $2 from Mark to pay for her loss. But she returned the check, disclaiming any knowledge of the bill having been sent.

A Monumental Work.
There was introduced in Hood River the present week, at clubbing rates, by a bookman, Ellis' Standard History of the United States in six handsomely bound volumes. The work is of exceptional merit, and the history covers a period from 400 A. D. to recent date. Besides being well written and historically reliable, it is profusely illustrated with engravings and colored plates of climatic incidents in the various parts of the United States. The colored pictures are rich in appearance and add much to the beauty of the book. The marginal reference is another helpful feature, and the work is indexed in a closing volume to a nicety, so that anything can be found in a moment.

It is a history for the student and a handy reference book for the professional man or woman.
SOME PROMINENT OPINIONS.
I have examined with care "The People's Standard History of the United States," by Mr. Edward S. Ellis, and have no hesitation in recommending it. It is what it is intended to be, a "People's History," full and complete in fact, interesting in arrangement, style and pictorial illustrations. It will be of the greatest service in any family library, especially for the young students.—C. K. Davis, U. S. Senator, Minnesota.
Upon examination of Ellis' American History which is being sold by Mr. Hackett, it seems to be a most excellent work and invaluable to any student of the history of our country, a valuable addition to any library and a necessity in school libraries. It would soon pay for itself in the library of any pursuing the common school studies of history and literature.—D. V. B. Bled, principal, Heppner Schools, Heppner, Ore., Nov. 2, 1900.
I take pleasure in speaking a word of commendation for Ellis' History of the United States. Of the three works that I have in my library, I consider this the best by far, because of its systematic classification, its comprehensiveness and its accuracy. I would recommend it for either the home or professional library.—A. L. Hutchinson, pastor First Presbyterian church, Seattle, Wash., Sept. 11, 1900.
No other history of the United States contains so much matter that is absolutely new—such, for instance, as Grant's startling statement (never before published) of what would have happened if England had recognized the Southern Confederacy in 1864. The books can be seen at the Glacier office. The editor has been appointed agent to take subscriptions till the first of the year at clubbing rates.

Crokinole Party.
An entertaining party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thompson last Saturday evening. Lunch was served and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Herzhner, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Haynes, Misses Anne Smith, Carrie Butler, Agnes Dukes, Minnie Brown, Katie Davenport, Cora Coppel, Alvina Hoadley, Lena Snell, Minnie Elton, Mollie White, Will Davidson, Lou Davidson, Arthur Davidson, Bert Rand, Fred Coe, Doug. Langille, Sam Blowers, Leslie Butler.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Barnes gave a whist party to invited friends last Friday evening. Mrs. C. R. Bone won first prize for ladies, and Prof. Thompson won first prize for gentlemen. Lunch was served and a very pleasant evening was spent. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bone, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Bone, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Butler, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Davidson, Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Brosius, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thompson, Mrs. A. B. Canfield, Misses Alvina Hoadley, Lena Snell, Mollie White, Minnie Elton, Carrie Butler, Van Wyck.

Miss Stella Brown of The Dalles visited her sister at Frankton last Saturday.

The Rhyme Social.
The rhyme social given by the ladies' aid society of the Congregational church, Thanksgiving evening, was in every way a great success. A delightful programme was interspersed with the reading of rhymes by the different members of the Aid. All were received with rapturous applause. A. O. U. W. hall was filled by an appreciative audience, and the total receipts of the evening amounted to $46.70. Coffee and sandwiches were served at the conclusion of the programme. Mrs. J. L. Herzhner, who presided, asked that copies of the poetry recited be handed her at the close of the meeting. The following responded, and their efforts in the line of poetry are here given the benefit of our circulation:
Miss Lena Snell—
Miss White have come here to tell
These people, kind and true,
About the way we had to make
A dollar out of our poor
If we were smart, like little boys,
We might say we made it slick;
And then we were asked how
Our answer would be, grieved it
But since we are not little boys,
And teachers of the same,
We must be very dignified
And answer with proper mein.
So if you will please reply
To the questions I shall ask,
Our friends will soon be learning
How our dollar we were earning.
What does it mean when we hear
A sound like ting-a-ling-ling?
How many minutes that our classes'
Time will bring—
What is the first upon the list?
And then the second, please,
And what shall we do with our troublesome
Boys?
And my dear sister, to tease
Miss Mella White—
I'm glad you have asked me to answer
A few questions instead of a rhyme;
For I have been thinking and thinking
About our dollar, and how to earn it,
Still I have not succeeded
In making myself a Longfellow;
So I will proceed to answer
Your questions one at a time.
A sound like ting-a-ling-ling?
Call it the sound of money.
And then it's but a few moments
Until the class will begin.
Arithmetic requires supreme
Until the first half hour is gone;
And then we journey through lands unknown
Until the second half hour is run.
Our troublesome boys and mischievous girls
Are only temporarily so.
For as soon as they are given some work to do
They'll let their mischief go.
And now I think we've done very well
Talking in rhyme, please,
So let us say to our dear friends,
This is how we've earned our dollar.
Mrs. F. H. Burton—
Mrs. F. H. Burton might tell thee, with a tongue
Of flame,
The way by which my honest dollar came
To be made in the society to aid,
For tongues of flame are but the fitting end
Of wood that's split while backs do ache and
And the 'you all may think so, I say it is no
Joke,
For the result of my hard labor has all gone
Up in smoke.
Mrs. M. F. Shaw and Mrs. C. R. Bone—
We earned our dollar easily,
For as soon as they were given some work to do,
Orders we take and promptly fill,
And we never present an exorbitant bill.
Mrs. McMullen—
I was a man to our town,
Who looked for Butler's bank,
Which could not be found,
And I thought of my account,
I'll be glad to give you my discount,
So the check I cashed and $10 made,
For I was a man to the Congregational Aid,
I was told a dollar I must get;
But, is it not funny how I got that money,
I cashed a check.
Mrs. F. B. Barnes—
I arose one morn at the break of day,
And earned 50 cents this simple way,
I washed five shirts and starched with Care,
And hung them out to dry in the open air,
I ironed them then and put them away,
And went to my husband to collect my pay,
I rested from labor a month or two,
While waiting for something else to do,
Winter came on and the nights grew cold,
So I made a long garment my husband to Send.
It was made of cotton flannel, thick not thin;
And I think it's a very nice one,
My husband wore it with joy and pride,
Praised me and gave me 50 cents beside.
Mrs. N. Torstevin—
Sing a song of money,
A pocket full of rhymes,
Poets of the Ladies' Aid
Draw up in lines,
To tell how they earned a dollar
In their last vacation time,
Some, like the old woman who never told lies,
Earned theirs by selling cakes and pies,
I mended a pair of my husband's pants,
For which I could find neither rhyme nor Reason.
Mrs. J. F. ARMOR—
A card from the secretary of the Ladies' Aid
Requests a dollar and tells how it was made,
All in rhyme, altho' every one knows,
Earning Oregon dollars is always prose,
Well, to earn that dollar I began to plan,
And thought of Mr. Davidson, the canary
Man,
And the tomatoes and beans and garden stuff,
He had said over and over, he hadn't enough,
There were beans in the garden, both yellow
And green,
As there was crisp as ever were seen;
There were blackberries, ripe, juicy and sweet,
And now to earn that dollar my plans were Complete,
And baskets and buckets were soon full,
Running over,
With beans from the garden, green as the Clover,
And a crate full of berries, fresh from the vine,
For pickles or pies, for cordials or wine,
So here is my dollar, shining and bright,
That you asked me to earn and bring here
Tonight,
And this is the ode to the berries and beans,
Which helped me to earn it, without other Means.
Mrs. E. E. SAVAGE—
My poetry is blank verse.
Mrs. AUGUSTA PRICE—
This lady said she couldn't compose lines to suit her, so she called upon the editor of the Glacier and the machine was set to work and turned out this gem:
Some earn money by washing pans,
But I earned mine by labeling cans.
I had four thousand socks to darn within a given time,
And then to tell the way 'twas done in entertaining rhymes,
I lay awake three weeks or more to think
what I should say,
And it was to my head so bad I most forgot to pray.
So when I knew my hour had come to read
those lines aloud,
My best words were taken to my heels to face this laughing crowd,
They'd rips from here to Egypt and to India's
equator's torrid band,
Then they started back across lots 'round the
equator's torrid band,
Some gathered round the edges, drew them
down to their feet,
For I'm teaching short-cut methods, how to
"simplify the darn."
One I fixed with stick'em plaster, like a pancake, s-m-o-o-t-h and round;
Patted neatly with the ladle lid I'd glued it safe and sound.
One I stepped up whole and solid with a brand of chewing gum;
But it fell some like a pebble, and it struck the teacher's head a million from the sight.
I'd often feth.
One hole there was, d-a-r-k and a-w-f-u-l, nothing about 'bout this was same;
So I built a cabin round it so nobody'd jump
my claim.
Here's a tale of woe and sorrow, 'nough to madden the stoutest warrior,
But I think I'd better close this, or you'll soon be all asleep.
Mrs. MARY CLARK—
This lady cheerfully gave to the Aid
I earned with work similar to the man with the spade—
Two warm summer mornings before breakfast
Mrs. H. J. FREDERICKS—
To Paradise Farm one day I went,
To see if I could earn a cent,
And to my great surprise I found,
Instead of a cent I earned a half crown.
Upon the ladder I did stand—
I reached and pulled, scratched my hands,
Picking luscious Royal Annes.
I tore my clothes were out my shoes,
I thought I never would get through,
And then I saw the dollar earned,
My mind I to the forty turned;
To the valley then I went,
And there I did trees, I plucked my tent;
And picking hops the forty earned,
I homeward then my footsteps turned,
Determined that, whatever came,
To earn a dollar I would never try again.
Mrs. F. C. BROSIUS—
Once upon a time, as the story-tellers say,
I determined to earn my dollar in this way:
By making pies and doughnuts galore,
I found a ready sale for these and more;

But fearing to overstock the market if I persisted.
The importunities for "sinks" I resisted.
Mrs. JAMES GRHAM—
One dollar I earned in this way,
But not with a spade,
I did work at home,
And did not for my room.
Mrs. A. B. CANFIELD—
To earn a dollar seemed so easy,
I laughed till I was almost weepy;
But when I came to look around,
I wonder how I could be found,
I must confess I could not see where
I'd find the coin—'t was on the square.
I thought of pickles, both sour and sweet,
And all the things that people eat;
But with all the cooks on every hand,
I feared I'd have to leave the land,
And then be told, at the end of all,
That I'd get the dollar some other fall.
In this dilemma I asked a witch,
Old Indian Jennie, who wears no switch;
She told me to let the eating go hang
And turn my attention to rattley-bang,
I took the first urchin I saw by the collar,
And for a piano lesson got a big dollar.

Mrs. J. L. HERZHNER—
Till money in mourning numbers
Life is simply time for slumbers,
For the ladies of our Society
Must earn a dollar without notoriety.
So at work I set to make some candy—
I stirred and pulled till it turned out dandy;
So with basket on arm I left the house
As stealthily and quietly as any mouse.
I walked the streets of our town
Till I sold the candy, every pound;
But I went home before my hour,
Not one lady said, "Come some more."
Mrs. C. J. HAYES—
No romance is woven around my dollar in money,
In earning it there is nothing peculiar or
funny,
I just churned the cream and got golden butter;
Now, here is my dollar without frown or mutter.

Mrs. M. A. COOK—
The most perplexing time I ween,
Of all my early days,
Was wondering how I'd earn ten times—
I thought of many ways,
And through my pity husband said,
"I'll give you quarters four,
If you will make me two new shirts and lose down before my door."
Had he proposed a trip to Mars,
Or to the polar circles,
I would have felt just as sure
Of earning the few times.
But courage wins in every race,
And I thought with a sigh,
With teachers of the same, I can do
I'd make the shirts or die.
So I went shopping down to Hand's,
Bought black satin and thread,
Until the money was all gone,
This said, "is not all said."
The hours of weary toil I spent,
For the Dalles and our dear friends,
Enough to wash them while they last,
The briny tears I wept.
I stitched the bosoms fancy like,
Two pockets put in one,
I tried to work the cloth all in,
At last they both were done,
No husband's praise and no backmost streets
When down town he must go.
He says he's proud of his new shirts,
To be made in the society to aid,
He says, "there's not much fit to them,
But they resemble shirts."
I confess when he smiles and winks
He professes a wound that hurts.
I see them in my startled dreams,
They haunt me on the line,
Confront me like a specter dark
When on that "hub" of mine.
If some kind tramp would only steal
Them when hung out to dry,
But alas! I fear he would not think
Them cross about to try.

While in despair I see a gleam
Of hope in times of gloom,
And though a blunder I have made,
I'll try again for times.
Mrs. R. E. HARRISON—
The amount of dollars is somewhat in my line,
But it's a pretty hard matter to make a good rhyme,
And when I believe that I can make money
I fear that my rhyming will sound rather funny.
The way that I earned this dollar in cash
Was by peddling potatoes and nut up hash,
By keeping the baby from running out doors
And helping my husband do part of the chores
So while I was waiting and putting things
With an eye out for everything, early and late,
The shakels kept coming in a moderate stream
But the way they were going makes the eagle scream.
