An American crossing Europe once bought a first-class stage ticket for a day's ride through a mountainous country. After several hours' riding he thought it very foolish to have bought a first-class ticket when all passongers apparently fared alike. So he asked the driver what he got that the second and third class passengers did not. The driver assured him that his value would appear before the end of the journey. He saw the point when, just after dinner, at the foot of a seven-mile hill, the driver announced: "First-class passengers, keep your seats; second class, get out and walk; third class, get out and PUSII!

There is a parallel to this in our Shoe business. When you buy our Shoes and Rubbers you may be excused for wondering what more you get than those who buy second and third class goods at a few cents less first cost, but it is sure to appear before the end of the shoe's journey.
