The man Weigle, mentioned by our correspondent in another column as starying his horses, is camped in a small one-roomed house near F. Fosberg's place. He has five children, one a girl 10 years old, and all are huddled in the small house. He came here from Wyorming about two months ago, and being in destitute circumstances, a subscription was taken up for him by the good people of the M. E. church. He refuses to allow his daughter to be given a home where she could be properly clothed and cared for. He should be looked after by the authorities.
