

Hood River Glacier.

FRIDAY, JULY 25, 1902.

As Seen by a Newcomer.

The following article is a contribution to the Hood River (Oregon) Gazette, written by Charles Davidson, father of H. F. Davidson of the Davidson Fruit Co.

Hood River, Oregon, July 1, 1902.—Editor Gazette, Centerville, Ohio: My last communication from here was soon after my arrival. Then I had only seen the perpetually snow covered mountains and the beautiful and world-wide fame of Oregon red apples and Yellow Newtown pippins. Since then I have seen the winter, spring and the fall into the summer.

The fall was delightful, without a killing frost until very late in November, and with the exception of three or four days there was no zero weather—the temperature was as mild as the winters in northeast Georgia, where I spent four years. The exceptions are, that here there are more rainy days during winter than in Georgia, but people here pay very little attention to rain, and do not take cold from getting wet like they do in Ohio and the East. Another feature of this climate is that there are no storms, tornadoes, cyclones or cutting cold winds in winter. No March winds that get under our jackets and make our teeth chatter. The wind seldom blows harder than a gentle breeze and always so soft and balmy as to be almost pleasant. The snow is usually followed by snow. There is more snow here than in Georgia. Usually from one to three weeks snow. Never any blizzards. The wind seldom blows any while it is snowing, which usually comes straight down and in great big flakes as large as peach or apple blossoms. During last winter I saw snow piled one foot high or more on top of fence posts, and three inches high on the top of fence boards and clotheslines. During the snow season there was only three mornings that the thermometer registered zero, or a few degrees below freezing. The ground never freezes deep enough here to freeze the potatoes that are not dug. The mild winters are enough to repay almost anybody making a change from the East and northwest to this part of the commonwealth. Personally I am delighted with the climate, especially the summer up to this time. An sleeping each night under nearly as many blankets and quilts as I did during the winter, with only two days that the thermometer registered eight degrees in the shade. Besides, you do not get hot or exhausted in the sun, because there is always a bracing, fresh, cool breeze coming up the river, with exception of an occasional east wind that is a little dry and dusty, but does not last very long. I will be frank with Eastern people and say this is not a good corn country, for two reasons. One is that corn is too slow. Don't make money fast and easy enough. Another is that we do not have much use for it, only to make mush and butter cakes. The main reason is that this is a horticultural country. Ten or fifteen acres cultivated in strawberries and fruit here will give better returns and larger wages to labor than one hundred or one hundred and sixty acres cultivated in the ordinary way and rotation of crops in Knox and adjoining counties. Strawberries and apples are the staple products of this valley, with raspberries, blackberries, pears and plums as side lines, which in the aggregate amount to a large amount and each year increasing.

There are two companies here that do an extensive business shipping berries and fruit. The Hood River Fruit Growers' Union, which does a cooperative business, was organized in 1883 by Mr. H. F. Davidson and others, of which he was elected business manager for three or four years, which developed the fact that there was room and a demand for another shipper. He resigned his place and organized the present Davidson Fruit Company, which buys berries and fruit outright on the spot, or ships on consignment and stores apples, and deals in fertilizers, agricultural implements, wagons, buggies, and manufactures berry crates and fruit boxes in which they worked up over one million feet of lumber last year and will nearly double that amount this year. Last year they did a business of between two and three hundred thousand dollars, and will increase that this year as there will be a full apple crop.

From the time winter breaks, through the spring time, we hear little but strawberry talk. The dogs bark strawberries, the roosters crow strawberries, the children, even the very little ones, cry for strawberries and are not quieted until they get red ripe strawberries, and are not then quieted until they get Hood River strawberries. One of my personal weaknesses is to be credulous, but I took that strawberry talk with a reasonable degree of allowance and waited until the season would come, and now I am like old Mrs. Sheba said about Mr. Solomon. "She had had been told."

The Davidson Fruit Company started out early to make 60,000 strawberry crates and hallowells or boxes to fill them, but the season was not one-third gone until they discovered that they would be compelled to make another ten thousand to supply the demand for the berries, including cherries and other berries. A hallowell or box holds one pound, and a crate holds 24 hallowells, so you may figure out how many hallowells and how much handling it takes to get a crate of berries ready to ship. The first half crate, or 12 pounds of berries, where sold in this market on May 15, for which the Davidson Fruit Company paid fifty cents per pound or six dollars for the half crate. The next sale was made by the D. F. Co., on May 21, of five and one-half crates for $6 per crate, or $33 for the lot, to the steward of President Harman and party's train that passed through here on the Oregon coast line.

From the Southern Pacific railway system, of which the railroad here is part. From that until June 5 the growers got $4 per crate for their berries. On June 2 the first car load lots were shipped. One car load by each company, which increased very day until they shipped seven car loads in one night. The last car-load shipment was sixty-six, and in addition to that there was shipped by common every day express and by what would have loaded twenty-five more cars. They put 620 or 730 crates into a car, according to size of the car. They are all put into cold storage or refrigerators and put into passenger cars from here. It requires four or six tons of ice for each car. Besides there are icing stations where the cars are re-iced whenever it is needed. The price of berries did not go below three dollars per crate to the grower, until after they began to ship car loads, and never went below $1.75 for prime berries, properly graded and well packed, and will average the grower two dollars per crate, or a little over for the whole crop. Seedlings and poorly packed berries, sold to factors on the street as low as $1.25 per crate, but there was no excuse for anybody selling for that price if they had cultivated, picked and packed their berries properly. The crop has been a very satisfactory one this year and profitable too.

There seems to be an increasing demand each year for Hood River berries. The high prices paid. One man has hauled in close to three thousand crates of strawberries off of twenty acres, and will take off quite a nice lot of cherries from the same ground, and by next year the cherry crop will bring nearly as much money as the berries, and after that will be the paying crop. All the land here is strawberry land, while at the same time it is good orchard or fruit land. Strawberry growing is the sure thing crop every year. It requires about as much work to cultivate one acre of strawberries as it does to raise four acres of corn. The net profit per acre after paying for cultivation, picking and packing crates etc., will run from $150 to $250 per acre this year. When I came here last year land was selling from $125 to $165 per acre, now it is selling for $250 to $300 per acre, with but little on the market. There is plenty of improved land on the market, but the price is also advancing in ratio of the improved lands. Unimproved land can be bought for from $40 to $100 per acre, according to location. Ten or fifteen miles back it can be bought for as low as five or ten dollars per acre, very rich, productive strawberry and apple land.

People can make no mistake by investing in Hood River valley land at present prices, either for homes or as a speculation. Hood River valley strawberries bring the highest average price of any berries grown on the continent, from beginning to end of the season. They will beat anything farther back, keep longer than berries grown elsewhere. They possess flavor and keep long quality peculiar to this locality. Last year they were carried in good condition to Hong Kong, China. This year a trial consignment was sent there but up to the present no reports have been received.

The apples grown here are also superior, and bring a higher price than apples grown elsewhere. Last year they were sold for European markets, and already there have been people here to buy apples for the Paris market next winter. Whenever Hood River valley people go to fairs, fruit shows and exhibitions they are sure of bringing home the medals and leave the favorable mention for the other fellows.

Oregon now holds the Wilder medal, which is a national trophy, largely by Hood River. In California where there is much greater celebrity of crops, land that will or does not yield nearly as large net profits per acre, sells readily for from $40 to $1000 per acre, with twelve months' hot sun and drought every year. The Hood River people are very conservative and avoid every thing that has the appearance of a speculative boom. Consequently the growth is slow and permanent, and the old fogies are not disturbed in their easy, slow methods of doing business. Which accounts for the real estate boomers not being in evidence, like they were in Findlay during the natural gas boom there ten or fifteen years ago. This town and valley is destined to be in the near future a very popular and important place as a summer resort. It is only thirty miles from Mount Hood, a perpetual snow covered mountain, with an easy grade and of comparatively easy access to the peak after reaching the snow line. The easiest of access of any perpetually snow covered mountain on the continent, which will necessarily soon have an electric railway which will place the mountain within two hours' ride from here and the steam boat landing; only sixty-five miles by railroad from Portland, and eight hours by steam boat on the Columbia river, through magnificent scenery. The opportunity and possibility is here. Whoever gets in on the ground floor will gather in some coin. Can't help it. Anybody who is, or may become interested in the resources of this valley, can get all the information there is to be gotten by writing Messrs. Briggs, Culbertson & Co., the leading real estate firm in this valley. They are in every respect trustworthy business men, who will take pleasure in furnishing all the information at their command. In addition I want to say to my friends that I like this country very well. A place where there are no cold March winds and snow storms, no days with from five to fifteen changes and different kinds of weather all in one day, pleases the "Red Deacon" pretty well. The people of Oregon have recently made some progress that pleases the Deacon, as well as the weather and climatic conditions, of which I will speak to Col. Bell in the future, and I know he will print them. In the cause of Altruism. CHARLES DAVIDSON.

The University of Oregon. The University of Oregon will open its twenty-seventh session at Eugene, Wednesday, September 17. The outlook for the year seems at present very promising. A number of new men have been added to the faculty, all thoroughly fitted both by preparation and experience, for their work. The university buildings are being repaired and improved during the summer, the dormitory, gymnasium, and Deady hall receiving special attention. Students intending to enter this fall are invited to correspond with the president relative to their work. Catalogues will cheerfully be sent on application.

The exploits of Tracy, since his escape from the Salem penitentiary, have caused more sales of newspapers in Portland than any other event that has ever occurred in the world. The extra sales on the strength of Tracy have exceeded those that were caused by the Spanish-American war at the time when excitement was highest. This fact is vouched for by reputable newspaper men who have recently gone over the figures.

A measure of Parliament is said to be circulating about the London clubs a typewritten copy of an epitaph which he solemnly declares is intended for John Pierpont Morgan, and should be taken by him as a warning not to push his well-grabbing enterprises too far.

The epitaph is as follows: Here lies his body that last upon this earth. He now belongs to what he thought it worth.

And God once more is running things alone.

Temel (Texas) Transcript.

It is with deep regret we record the sad death of our christian friend and sister, Mrs. R. L. Neves. She had partially recovered from a long and painful illness, and was on a visit to her father in Oregon, but a slight cold, taken on the way, caused a relapse and the death angel came on Thursday, June 26, and loosed her from all earthly suffering and she went home to God.

It always seems strange that ladies so alive and good, a happy companion with so much of life and love before them, should be the shining mark of death. But we know our heavenly father would not suffer it, if it were not for good. He is too wise to make a mistake, and too kind to do his dependent children any wrong. Therefore we resign ourselves to his providence, and pray for all who suffer. Whereas it has pleased him to take her angel spirit to himself, therefore, be it resolved,

1. That we ask God to give us grace to imitate her example in humility and preparation for the heavenly life.

2. That we have lost a faithful member of our Woman's Home Missionary Society, and a loyal member of our church.

3. That to the bereaved husband, to her loving parents, and aunt who so lovingly cared for her, we tender our deepest sympathy, and pray God's grace may sustain them in this great affliction.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society, published in our city papers and sent to the bereaved.

Mrs. M. A. Allen, Mrs. W. B. Wheeler, Mrs. W. L. Martin, Committee.
