

Hood River Glacier

FRIDAY, AUGUST 8, 1902.

Crapper District.

The Glacier man, senior, visited the Crapper district, last week and spent a couple of pleasant days with the good people of that neighborhood. D. S. Crapper, the pioneer of that section, he found in feeble health. Mr. Crapper was 80 years old July 25. He is a man of robust constitution and never had much sickness till six weeks ago; since then he has been troubled with shortness of breath. Mr. Crapper has a well improved farm. He settled upon it about twenty years ago, when he had the pick of the best part of the valley. Mr. Crapper now has his farm for rent. If the right kind of a renter comes along he will strike a bargain. He also has about 12 acres for sale on the road south of the school house at $110 an acre, with 80 apple trees, some bearing.

Strawberries are later here than in the lower valley, but they are very productive and of fine quality. Three years ago Mr. Crapper harvested 1350 crates off 4 1/2 acres. The farmers of this neighborhood are going largely into the cultivation of strawberries.

G. A. McCurdy's place, adjoining that of his father-in-law, D. S. Crapper, is noted for its fine strawberries. He has 47 acres in berries, and his crop this year sold for an average price of $1.93. One acre of five-year-old plants produced 178 crates. One acre set last September yielded 47 crates, and some of them sold for $4 a crate. The total yield, including one acre of young plants, was 503 crates. Mr. McCurdy has a delightful home surrounded by stately oaks whose shade is inviting on a summer day. Mr. McCurdy's parents, an aged couple, 80 years old, recently from New Brunswick, make their home with him. Mr. McCurdy's father was a cousin of Frank Pettygrove, who owned the townsite of Portland and named the city 57 years ago. T. A. Vanasud, adjoining McCurdy's, has seven-eighths of an acre in strawberries that yielded 129 crates. T. H. Hayner, who now owns the Reed place, has a nice little home and is doing well with strawberries.

Next above Mr. McCurdy's place, on the road to Davenport's mills, is that of J. J. Jordan's. This farm was formerly owned by Antone Wise and is also noted for its fine fruit. Mr. Jordan has recently cleared some land on the hill above his house, where he has set five acres in apple trees. The soil here is loose and the location an ideal one for an apple orchard. He has the land between the trees in strawberries, which are doing well without irrigation. Across the road from Mr. Jordan's place is that of J. H. Gould. Mr. Gould has 20,000 plants, which this year produced 400 crates of berries. He also has a nice young orchard.

Fred Hertz, machinist for the Davenport Bros. Lumber Co., has a good piece of land with a young orchard and some berries, but as he works away from home most of the time, his place shows the lack of attention.

J. I. Miller, who bought the Charles Hayner place seven or eight years ago, is a successful fruit grower. He has good orchards and big strawberry patches. This year, in connection with his own place, he had charge of Bob Wright's strawberry patch adjoining. His strawberry crop averaged him $1.85 a crate. Mr. Miller uses the following brand on his fruit boxes: "Stumpy Fruit Farm, J. I. Miller & Co., proprietors." His wife and children compose the "Co." He claims to have 9000 apple trees and 1000 stumps. The stumps will be handy to pick fruit from when the trees grow tall. Mr. Miller's son Willie broke the record as a strawberry picker this last season, leaving out the big day's work of Lee Buskirk with the wonderful berries on the Jones place. Willie Miller picked 24 boxes of strawberries in one day.

Tracy Kills Himself
Tracy is dead. Wounded by a severed artery he shot himself to avoid capture. A posse had the outlaw surrounded Tuesday night near Lake creek, Davenport, Wash. While running from a barn to a wheat field Tracy received a fusillade of rifle shots, one taking effect in his left leg between the knee and ankle, breaking the bone and severing an artery. Tracy crawled into the grain field and the posse remained outside to await reinforcements. About 11 o'clock at night a single pistol shot was heard. That was it. It was Tracy shooting himself through the head with the 45-caliber revolver. His lifeless body was found the next morning and taken to Davenport for shipment to Seattle or Salem.

One Dog Dead—The Other Lives.
Hood River, Aug. 7, 1902.—Editor Glacier: Lenore Adams' little pug dog is dead at the hands of the poisoner, the fatal dose having been handed him just at nightfall. He was absent only a few minutes when he was called back into the house and put to bed. At that time he showed no symptoms of the poison, therefore the dastard who did the deed purposely waited until about bedtime, and so gave no chance to try to save his life. A humane person cannot conceive how any one but a fiend in human shape can desire to torture and take the life of a poor little innocent dog which never harmed any one for some petty spite or malice which the poisoner may harbor against the owner of the dog or some member of the household.

If the cruel poisoner could have seen the anguish and sorrow of the child whose pet and companion little Pug was surely the inhuman wretch would have felt an atom of remorse for the wicked deed committed. All humane people would have with delight a law which would punish severely with fine and imprisonment dog poisoners and dog biters. M. S. Adams.

fisher who drifted from Illinois and the Dakotas out to Oregon in search of health and found it on his little claim up in the foothills of Mount Defiance.

The Glacier man continued his trip up the mountain road as far as the new mill being built by the Davenport Bros. Lumber Co. The mill is located about half a mile above the old Parker house. Fred Hertz had about completed setting up the machinery and the mill was about ready to start up. The force of men at work on the mill and building roads and flume are boarded at the Parker house, which is managed by Mrs. F. E. Newby. There are hundreds of acres here owned by the Davenport's, which are being denuded of timber, that will some day in the near future be wanted for orchard land. The old Berger ranch, now owned by some one in California, is in bad shape. The fences are down, and bands of cattle have destroyed the once fine orchard. William Froebe of Sherman county has about 150 fat steers ranging on Davenport's lands that are herded by J. N. Spencer.

Going south from Crapper school house the good farms of Ida Crapper, E. E. Lyons, J. R. Kinsey, T. J. Cunningham, Henry Hackett and John Jakku were passed. On the slope towards Hood river are the places of John Kelley, J. Wickham, John Hakel, Van Johnson, Charles Reed, and T. J. Cunningham's homestead. The latter is known as Edgemont, so named because the biggest part stands on edge. Starting from the river, its limits on the mountain side reach an elevation of something less than 2000 feet. It has a good deal of land to the acre. Van Johnson is one of the best improved farms in the neighborhood. He has good meadow land, bearing orchards and strawberry fields. He recently rented his place for a term of years to Frank Barnhart. Van will take a well-earned vacation while he gets more land to improve his place. John Hakel has carved out a good home on the bank of Hood River, where he has good orchards, clover and strawberry fields. His father, John Hakel, and cousin, Miss Fiina Niva, recently arrived from Finland. The old gentleman will make his home with his son. Mr. Hakel has invented and had patented an implement to trim strawberry vines that is operated by hand and will prove a great labor saver. John Kelley has a good farm and home. His orchards are looking well, and the apple trees will produce a good lot of fruit this year. John Kelley's place has been well known for years as productive in fruit and especially early strawberries. The same can be said of J. Wickham's place adjoining. Mr. Wickham has a big orchard of bearing apple trees and other fruit. He is clearing more land to set to strawberries and was engaged in setting plants when visited by the Glacier man.

H. C. Hengst and son Joseph have one of the best places fronting on Hood river. They have 7000 apple trees, 600 of them bearing, all good winter varieties. They thin the fruit and allow no trees to overbear. They have excellent clover land, and last year harvested six tons of hay off 11 acres, first crop. From 11 acres they have gathered 400 crates of strawberries. Everything about the Hengst farm gives evidence of thrift and content. Mr. and Mrs. Hengst are getting well along in years and desire to sell the farm and build and live upon their place in town. They offer the farm, 120 acres, for sale at $60 an acre. We know of no cheaper place in the valley. Some of the best places in the Crapper district we failed to visit on this trip.

Ernest V. Jensen has the lasting gratitude of the Glacier compositorial force for a generous supply of delicious ice cream, Wednesday afternoon. May he live long and make much more such ice cream.

Joe Pursler left a 15-foot bearing blackberry vine at the Glacier office. He says it would have been 4 or 5 feet longer if the kids had not broken it off.

Earl Bartness has gone to Arlington, where he has a position driving a team for a threshing crew. He expects to be gone a month or more.

Harold and Lella Hershner are spending the month of August with their grandparents near Monmouth, Oregon.

Mrs. Laura Baldwin has rented Bone's residence property and will open first-class ice-cream parlors.

J. H. DeMoss, the mail carrier for the rural free delivery, took up his work last Friday, August 10.

There will be no services at the Congregational church on the third and fourth Sundays in August.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Castner left today for Maple Dell, where they will go into camp for a week or more.

Customers buying ice cream at Jensen's confectionery will please return all buckets and cans.

Miss Mable Walker of Portland is visiting the families of Thomas Shere and D. N. Byrlee.

Rev. J. L. Hershner will preach at the Pine Grove chapel next Sunday at 3:30 p. m.

Arthur Cuning is in the employ of the McGuire Bros' meat market.

H. R. Lewis re-urned from Portland last week with a fine new piano.
