FRIDAY, AUGUST 15, 1922.

TO ADVERTISE HOOD RIVER.

The Hood River Commercial club is making extensive preparations for the advertising of Hood River. For this work the club will make an expenditure of about $800, $650 of which will be used in printing some 75,000 16-page pamphlets, and $100 for a page ad in a special edition of the Pacific Farmer which the Portland board of trade is having printed for gratuitous distribution in the East. A soliciting committee from the club has canvassed the business men of the town, and reports that between $600 and $700 have been subscribed, with the prospects good for increasing this amount another $100.

The club first decided to issue 100,000 eight-page pamphlets, but after considering the matter and arranging for a number of illustrations, it was thought more advisable to increase the size of the pamphlets even though the number had to be cut down. As 16 pages will admit of a greater amount of descriptive matter, and will permit a much better display of the illustrations, this size was finally adopted. The full amount of money not being in sight for printing 75,000 16-page pamphlets, it was decided best to issue a contract for getting out 50,000 copies of this size, with the understanding that the number could be increased at any time as the necessary funds became available.

E. B. Bradley, Hood River's job printer, will do the printing, and has agreed to turn out 50,000 pamphlets for the reasonable price of $425. The half-tones are being made in Portland, and Mr. Bradley expects to have some of the books ready for distribution by the first of next week.

These pamphlets when printed will be turned over to the O. R. & N. company at Portland, which company will ship them free of charge to the distributing points in the East, where they will be given out to Eastern people who are inquiring for descriptive literature of the West. The Harriman system of railroads will make rates, September 1, intending settlers in the West. These rates will be a special inducement to have the Eastern people come West and see for themselves just what this western country is like. The Harriman lines are making an effort to attract immigration to Oregon in particular, and to this end there have been established in a number of the larger Eastern cities information bureaus for the distribution of Oregon literature. G. M. McKinney, general immigration agent for the Harriman lines, with his assistants, spent several weeks traveling over Oregon, acquainting himself with the conditions in the state and securing the co-operation of the people in distributing literature in the East. This is an excellent opportunity for Hood River to attract Eastern immigration, and the Commercial club should be encouraged in the work it has undertaken.

The page ad in the Pacific Farmer, which the Commercial club has agreed to take for $100, will be supplied with the same matter that is to be contained in the pamphlets. This special edit in the Pacific Farmer is being issued by the Portland board of trade, and 100,000 copies of the same are to be issued September 1. The issue will contain general descriptive matter on one point in particular. Frank Lee, the editor, has had an ad running in 250 Eastern agricultural papers for the last three months, stating that this special edition would tell all about the Pacific Northwest, and requesting all those desiring information about this country to send a stamp and get a copy of this paper. Mr. Lee has received 30,000 or 40,000 requests for the paper already, and expects to receive nearly 100,000 before his paper is printed. This list of people to whom the Pacific Farmer will be sent is valuable from the fact that these people have signified their intention of wanting to know something about this country when they sent Mr. Lee a stamp for a copy of his special edition. It is an advertising scheme well worth the price, as it practically doubles the number of people who will receive Hood River literature.

Following are the names of those who have contributed to the fund needed by the Commercial club to defray the expenses of advertising Hood River:

With its issue of August 6 the Eugene

Morning Register began volume nine. The Register has an able editorial writer in the person of Will G. Gilstrap. Commenting on the prosperity of his paper he writes: "As in the past our future shall be directed toward clean journalism, championing the progress and development of Eugene, Lane county and Oregon upon legitimate lines, giving to the people a paper that they can heartily welcome to their homes. The journalist, to succeed, must be in touch with the vital interests which affect the community, state and nation, and public welfare must be the watchword and above his ever busy pen. The proprietors are indelibly linked to journalism and have driven their stakes in Eugene so intentionally deep that we hope another half century will not remove them."

The drowning of a 12-year-old boy, near town, Wednesday morning, is one of similar accidents from which but few communities escape each summer. Boys will go in swimming, and now and then some one with immature judgment ventures beyond his depth and his frightened companions are unable to save him. This accident will cause many anxious parents to keep their boys from the water, and will tend to make the boys themselves more careful. But it is not right to deny the boys the privilege of swimming. Better have some reliable person teach them to swim, and when they are able to take care of themselves in the water, wholesome parental discipline should tend to subdue any attempt at recklessness.

The total Cuban revenues collected during the occupation of the island by the United States military authorities was $57,200,000. The expenditure therefrom was $55,570,000, the remainder being turned over to the Republic of Cuba at the time of the withdrawal of the United States authority, May 19, 1902. And there are people who think the United States has no business meddling with island possessions.

The Harriman immigration agents will distribute 75,000 Hood River pamphlets among Eastern people seeking homes in the West. If one family out of a thousand who read about Hood River decide to come here it will mean an addition to our population of from 300 to 400 people.

Hood River is mentioned in the latest school geography as a summer resort. The text-book maker evidently gathered his information before sordid commercialism directed the fortunes of our apple and strawberry growers.

Another instance of the tendency toward consolidation in all business enterprises was the union, Tuesday, of two Philadelphia morning papers—the Times and the Ledger.

The town of Hood River is still without fire protection. To the uninitiated it looks as if the matter were up to the city council.

Klickitat county has another newspaper, the Centerville Journal, Kelley Lee, editor and publisher.

Hood River could not meet this year's demands for strawberries. More people, more strawberries, more money.

Dr. Shaw to Return to Hood River.
Dr. M. F. Shaw has made purchase of the 100 acres of the N. J. Devold place, located within one mile of the Mount Hood post office. Dr. Shaw will make improvements on the place, and expect to move onto the same some time next spring. Dr. and Mrs. Shaw think there is no place quite so good as Hood River, and they will make this their summer home from now on. The doctor will retire from active practice for a couple of years, and in the meantime will do special work in an Eastern medical college, and spend his summers on his farm at Mount Hood. After completing his work in the East he will again resume his practice in Hood River.
The country home of Dr. and Mrs. Shaw is one of the sightliest places in the valley. The snow peaks of Hood and Adams are in plain view, and with a portion of the East fork of Hood river running across one of the hills, can be made a delightful mountain home. Mrs. Shaw very appropriately named the place "Mountain View Ranch." Most of the land can be placed under cultivation, and there are at present 350 young bearing fruit trees on the farm. Hood River people will be glad to welcome the return of Dr. and Mrs. Shaw.

Drowning of George Tenold.
George, the 12-year-old son of N. G. Tenold, was drowned in the slough near the ice house below town, about 11 o'clock, Wednesday morning, while in swimming with a number of other boys of his age. A younger brother gave notice of the drowning to the parents, a short time after the accident. Assistance was secured and a number of people hurried to the scene. The body was found by George Smith in four feet of water, an hour or two after death, and carried to the undertaking parlor.
Funeral services were held Thursday and the body buried the same afternoon at White Salmon.

The clipping in last week's paper from the Standard Leader, in which it was announced that M. F. Isenberg was an aspirant for the position of forest supervisor for the north half of the Cascade reserve, perhaps came as a surprise to most Hood Riverites, as Mr. Isenberg had not made public his request for the position. If Congressman Moody can influence the interior department that he has the right to make the appointment for this position, we should like to see our follow-up man secure the office. Mr. Isenberg is fully qualified to take up the duties of forest supervisor, as he did special forestry work for the interior department under the Harrison administration. It is a fact not generally known, but Mr. Isenberg was the first to suggest the establishment of a forest reserve at Mount Hood. The suggestion was made to a former editor of this paper, who first brought public attention to the matter through the paper. There are many Hood River people who endorse Mr. Isenberg's candidacy.

"New is the Appointed Time."
The O. R. & N. Co. has just issued a handsome illustrated pamphlet entitled "Oregon, Washington and Idaho and their Resources." It has much to say about Hood River. People in the East are anxious for information about the West, and this pamphlet will give the O. R. & N. Co. a list of interested Eastern people who are likely to be interested in the books which will be likely to be sent to them.

Steadily.
Steadily turn the mill wheel of Time,
Steadily round with the night and day,
Steadily comes the fall of rains,
Steadily sweep the clouds away.

Steady the turns of the seasons come,
Winter and summer, with steps between,
The falling seed to the fruitful earth
And the autumn fullness of shine and sheen.

Steady the sun with his royal wealth
Of life in his love beams on his way,
Its atoms bespeaking its noble place
In the cosmos grand forever and aye.

Steady the moon with his tender light,
Gathered in cold that is not known,
Beams on its way with its purpose true,
Its wisdom inherent, deep like that flows
Through all that is, that ever has been,
Through all that ever will be, the same,
Steadily by its pathway, I've having accounts
Burning as if in consuming flame.

Steady, — and earth, gives the answer back,
Now is reaching in active life,
Now in a glow of unquitting force,
Now in a seeming wave of strife.

Steadily growing by atoms affined,
Building and gleaming, then dark'ning
Ice cap and quaking, the tireless mind
Storing and freeing and tolling amain.

Steadily, — God, may we see the great plan
Which the earth and sky and sea know,
Told by the waves of the sparkling and flow,
Like the waves of the sea, lo! it passes us by.

Passes and bids us his burden perceive,
Steadily holding its treasures so,
"Come by my pathway, I've having rare,
I am co-worker," — and ever thus it is.

Only be steady; oh, mankind, be true!
Seek ye for knowledge, 'tis close at your
Powers ye have that steadily grow,
Grow as you use them in gathering more.

Steady then; ye are God, ye are man,
"Tarry not, tarry not, tarry not,"
Backward? Ah, never! The upward and on,
Ceaselessly, steadily, hour by hour.
