Under a handsome colored cover, the Scientific American publishes a most interesting store of information on "Transportation." The number deals with all phases of the subject, taking up first marine transportation, which is treated in a series of well-illustrated articles. Railroad transportation covers 9 pages of reading matter, in which much of interest will be found. Following this section is that of electric tractions.

A Merry Christmas.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1902.

The bureau of forestry has received a report from one of its agents which shows that the damage caused by forest fires in Northwestern Oregon and Southwestern Washington during September was much greater than has been generally supposed. After a careful trip through the regions devastated by the fire, William T. Cox, who was detailed by the bureau for this work, in a conservative estimate places the damage in Oregon and Washington at $12,767,100. Of this, $3,910,000 is in Oregon and $8,857,100 in Washington. This includes all losses caused by the fires to farm property, saw mills, manufactured lumber, estanding timber, etc.
