

Hood River Glacier

FRIDAY, JANUARY 9, 1903.

The mayor's message, published in the council proceedings in another column of to-day's Glacier, makes a good showing for the three years the retiring mayor has administered the affairs of the city. The accompanying list of warrants drawn show where the money has gone. It is surprising, when we come to think of it, that our city, incorporated eight years ago, and with a population now of 1100, has never found it necessary to levy a tax. The message shows that much has been accomplished in the past two years towards preparing the way for permanent improvements that will benefit the city, such as the purchase of a city hall lot, sewer plans and estimates, surveying street grades, etc. Our retiring city officials deserve the thanks of their constituency for their excellent work and their economical management of the city's finances.

The Heppner Gazette got out a splendid New Year's edition of 24 pages, showing up the resources of Morrow county in a manner that will be of great benefit to the county.

About the Lewis and Clark Fair.
Hood River, Oregon, December 22, 1902.—Editor Glacier: If, instead of incorporating the Lewis and Clark Fair company, the citizens of Hood River had incorporated the Portland and Astoria Transportation company, or the Portland and Astoria Manufacturing company, or trading company, or some railway company to extend into the interior of Oregon, and had subscribed $500,000.00 to its stock and then sent a business man East for additional subscriptions, then they might have raised almost any sum of money up to ten million dollars. Then they would have started an enterprise that would remain with them, and develop into something larger and better year after year.

If they were to go before the legislature and cause to be passed an act appropriating $500,000, not for a fair, but for public highways, to get access to our undeveloped lands, then we might expect many more of the thousands who come here to remain with us and help develop the country.

Or, if they were to put $100,000 into a saw mill in Portland, another $100,000 into some other industry, and the remaining $300,000 into building paths and clearing their streets, they would do much better than putting it into empty fair buildings to be used for a brief three months. The fair will not develop Asiatic business for us. That is done by commercial houses sending agents there with samples of what we have to sell. The Chinese will not come here to see the fair. We must take our goods there and quote them low prices to induce them to buy.

If it is immigration we want, let us remember that the most desirable people for us are those who want good property; and good property in a town or city should always be on graded streets with sewers and water mains.

Good property in the country can be no where else than on good roads. The construction of a fair building will grade no streets nor roads, and will lay neither sewer pipe nor water mains.

After the whole thing has come and passed away we will find that we have misdirected our energy, wasted our money, and that the good citizen has bought a ticket and traveled homeward; and that only a few of the desirable and many of the helpless and distressed have remained at us.

We want nice people, and we want business people to join us as citizens and neighbors. A business man will more readily take a hold with us if he sees we are willing to take hold ourselves.

If it is the scheme of the East to catch the Easterner by a glittering show for a trap, we will find sooner or later that our trap is too expensive.

It is not necessary to have a fair to show our timber and shingles, for that is an exhibition in hundreds of thousands of lumber yards all over the East. It is not necessary to advertise our fruit, for that we can send East and exhibit in contrast with their fruit. We are the only people who have salmon, and that is known all over the East. Any other articles we can easily send there for them to look at. If it is climate and scenery that we want to exhibit, then let us open our roads and streets, and lay our sewers and water mains and make living here easy and attractive.

If it is manufacturing we want them to engage in, then let us put our money in with them. If we have money to invest in a fair, then we surely have it to invest in factories.

F. E. FINLAY.

The good roads movement inaugurated by the farmers of the East Side three weeks ago has caused considerable discussion. Two public meetings have been held and much interest manifested. A committee selected by the meeting has been soliciting money to improve the road from town to Pine Grove school house. Citizens of town and country have subscribed liberally, the committee reporting $500.00 subscribed. This sum, with what may be appropriated by the county, will give temporary relief. The mud holes will be filled up and the road widened and drained in places, but no permanent or lasting improvement can be expected from this amount of money being expended upon five miles of road. If this sum could all be expended upon half a mile or even less of macadam at one part of the road, it would be a start towards a good road for the whole distance. One-half mile of macadam road would show so favorably in contrast with the mud road that it might prove an object lesson and make it easy to get more liberal contributions each year to continue the good work. Work done upon a mud road can be only temporary; the work will have to be done again next year and every year until a permanent road bed is established. The glacier is not opposed to the present movement to patch the roads. There is urgent necessity for the work being done at once, but it is hoped the movement for a good road to Pine Grove will not be side-tracked by the liberal donations intended to tide over the present emergency.

A correspondent in another column of today's Glacier writes disparagingly of the Lewis and Clark centennial, to be held at Portland in 1905, and points out how in his opinion the money to be raised for the exposition might be spent to better advantage. The public highways and other enterprises mentioned by the correspondent are badly needed, but he takes a narrow view of the matter when he opposes the Lewis and Clark centennial. The one hundredth anniversary of the expedition of Lewis and Clark deserves the fitting celebration now being mapped out by the people of Portland and of other parts of the Pacific coast. Every Oregonian who ever read or heard of the hazardous trip of these early explorers from St. Louis to the shores of the Pacific should be proud to know their daring achievements are to be commemorated by a fitting celebration, a celebration national in its character, participated in by the civilized world. State pride should make all rejoice that Portland is big enough and enterprising enough to undertake this celebration. Portland citizens have subscribed nearly half a million dollars towards the exposition, the site has been selected, the various state legislatures and congress will be asked to make appropriations, and a half million dollars is not too much to ask of the Oregon legislature.

The New Year's Oregonian is a great paper. It is not so large as in former years, but the quality of its reading matter and illustrations is better than ever. The Lewis and Clark centennial exposition is given prominence. A good picture of a Hood River strawberry field is given. It is the kind of paper all Oregonians will delight to send to their friends in the Eastern states. It sells for 5 cents a copy and can be bought at Slemons' book store. The cost of mailing the paper is 3 cents.
