A Five Mill Tax.

A small number of taxpayers gathered at the school house Friday afternoon to vote a tax for carrying on our school for the ensuing year and to pay interest on bonds. A total of 21, including the janitor and one non-resident, were enough interested to attend the meeting. The clerk, C. E. Hemman, had posted figures as follows on the black-board when the meeting was called to order by Chairman E. H. Coon:

Expenses for present school year—Salaries.....	$ 2,840
Wood.....	100
Water.....	20
Incidentals.....	20
Interest on bonds.....	500
Total.....	3,560

The amount of assessable property in the district at last assessment was $315,449. The number of children of school age found in the district at last census was 446.

G. J. Gessling moved that a tax of 4 mills be levied—1.5 mills for salaries and interest on bonds and 2.5 mills for salaries and incidental expenses. The amendment was carried, when the original motion was put and adopted unanimously and the meeting adjourned.

Council Proceedings.

The council met in special session on Monday evening, January 28, to consider the matter of levying a tax for city purposes.

Present—Mayor Coon, Aldermen Blowers, H. F. Davidson, Prather, Gessling and Recorder Nickelsen and Marshal Cunningham.

The mayor stated the object for which the special meeting had been called.

Alderman Prather opposed the levy of a tax on the ground that anything short of a 20-mill tax would be insufficient to provide the necessary funds for fire protection and other necessary improvements, and as such a tax would cause great dissatisfaction he opposed the levy of any tax at all, claiming that if the city could not make necessary improvements it could get along without a tax, as it had done in previous years.

Alderman Blowers also opposed a tax on the ground that very little could be accomplished with the amount that would be raised, but said that as the present condition of the cess-pool throughout the city were a menace to public health, he would be heartily in favor of bonding the city for the amount necessary to put in a sewer system.

Alderman Mayes said that while he was not as familiar with the conditions as some of the members, it was evident that the city must have revenue to pay ordinary running expenses and, in view of the fact that a tax that would be sufficient for that purpose.

Alderman Gessling favored a small tax for running expenses, figuring that the dog tax and other items collected by the marshal would help out considerably.

Alderman H. F. Davidson favored the levy of a tax sufficient to meet all ordinary demands without danger of running the city into debt. He said that the business interests of the city demanded some protection, and therefore it was necessary to have a city marshal, and as the city derived its support from the surrounding country he thought that the city should furnish some street lights for the accommodation of people from the country when business demanded their presence in town after night, as well as for the convenience of residents. He therefore moved that a levy of five mills be made.

The motion was seconded by Mayes. Gessling moved to amend by substituting three instead of five mills, which motion was seconded by Blowers.

Leslie Butler was accorded the privilege of the floor and made an eloquent plea in favor of a five-mill tax, holding that the interest of the city demanded an increase rather than a decrease in that rate.

On the question of the amendment Blowers, Gessling and Prather voted aye, H. F. Davidson and Mayes, no, and the amendment carried.

On the motion as amended, Prather voted no, all others aye and the motion prevailed.

This levy, if all taxes are collected, will provide a revenue of only $686.44, or a little more than what will be necessary to pay the marshal's salary.

ate without the losses that have heretofore been made on account of a lack of supply of berries.

Mr. Davidson says his trip has made a larger and much better market for the product of Hood River farms. The apple crop was extremely heavy throughout the country, but the market for the high grade Hood River apples has been good, and while there is a prospect for a much larger crop of strawberries in California, Colorado, Missouri and Wisconsin next season, the dealers all say they have a good trade for fancy Hood River berries and want them in large quantities, but that it is useless to ship ordinary fruit, as they can get plenty of that kind nearer home.

Mrs. Davidson, who accompanied her husband on his Eastern trip, will return until March 1, when she will return to her Hood River home accompanied by Wm. H. Chipping and family. Mrs. Chipping is a daughter of Charles Davidson and sister of H. F. Davidson. They will make Hood River their future home.

The Weather.
The weather has been variable for the past week. Saturday's heavy rain soaked the ground; Sunday was part sunshine and part stormy, with occasional showers of snow; Monday, snow fell all day, and Monday evening the beautiful was a foot deep; Wednesday morning the thermometer marked 22 degrees above zero, the coldest of the winter; Thursday morning as we go to press, a lively snow storm is prevailing, and it looks like we might have some old-fashioned Hood River winter weather.

For the benefit of our young skiamanians who are contemplating a trip to the strawberry fields next spring we will state there will be employment for hundreds of pickers in the Underwood neighborhood. And more agreeable people to work for than those around here will be hard to locate. Among our leading strawberry growers may be mentioned: Wm. Kellendonk, Robert Kline, C. E. Larsen, Ed Underwood, Fred Lohmeyer, Rosenkrantz, Wm. Wendorf, N. M. Munch and Huff—Pioneer.

STORY OF THE Spot Cash Grocery.

Once there was a grocer with a sparse patch of greens on his chops and a physiognomy that slanted out from his chin upward like a corn crib. Despite his abnormal bulb you could have crowded all his grey matter into a medium sized nut. In other words, his stock of erudition was a number of candle powers in excess of his bump of sagacity. Which explains why he sold his goods on time and promises, instead of extending his bill for the root of all evil.

The people viewed him as a sort of open-door proposition, and numbers of them came in and engaged space in his ledger to the extent of several chapters. On spare evenings the grocer was wont to trot out the big book and glaze over the prospects it was literally bulging with. He built beautiful ethereal castles. He could peep into the future and see that affluence and holidays were almost in pipe and needs awaiting his arrival. Everything bright and worth while was frantically beckoning him.

After a spell, though, he was awakened by a cruel lump, and he began to realize that he was playing against a wheel of fortune with numerous blanks thereon. Like Skilton's account had grown venerable and like sort of bung back about disorganizing. Spin Watson's aim in life appeared to be to put growth on his I. O. U. Abe Buck didn't lose any sleep over his'n. In fact there was a whole tribe of folks who seemed to be too proud to beg, too honest to steal, and so got trusted. There was another strata just above these proud bounds which now and then sauntered in and paid part on account, on the same principle that a man spins on his hands to wade in all the harder. To be sure a good many conscientious souls paid up promptly, but they were on the short end of the ledger, and so things wouldn't balance for the grocer.

Now it is not written that a dealer who is satisfied with a full letter and a lot of palvering customers is likely to blossom out into a J. Pierpont Morgan or a soulless corporation. This idea got right forinst Mr. Grocer, then, and made his brain purr. He realized that he had grasped opportunity by the end of the tail and just escaped being kicked to death. Right there and then he placed the seat of his trousers carefully on top of the office stool (he being within at the time) grasped the pen of his cross, and straightway resolved that henceforth no living soul would carry away any of his goods without flashing the evil rhino. It wasn't a dog's age before the people began to get next to the fact that the old grocerman knew his 'p's and q's. He could buy more in the open market with ready money. He could give hooping measures to his patrons for the actual weight of the time. His habitude was broadened in diverse ways. And it's needless to say that they were getting the long end of the thing. There were no book mistakes looming up every little while. Spot cash guarded the interests of customers. It keeps its Eagle Optics peeled for the grocerman.
