Oregon Lumber Company Take Charge.

"We mean to run it," said Charley Early when questioned by a Glacier reporter as to what the Oregon Lumber company is going to do now that it has bought the big mill of the Lost Lake Lumber company. "We expect to increase the present capacity of the mill," continued Mr. Early, "and while filling our large orders for railroad ties and timbers we shall also keep the local market well supplied with first class lumber. A force of men will be put to work immediately in the woods getting out logs, and at the same time further improvements will be made in Hood river by building several more splash dams. The people must not expect too much at once, as it will take several months to get things into proper shape. When running at our full capacity we shall have from 300 to 400 men on the pay roll, which means a daily expense of $1,000 or $30,000 a month."

When asked if a company store would be established, Mr. Early replied that this depended on future developments. "Heretofore," said Mr. Early, "these company stores have been more for the convenience of our men than anything else, and for the present I think there are sufficient stores in Hood River. In the course of two or three months our mill at Viento will be closed and the machinery moved here. Mr. Eccles will likely move his family to Hood River from Logan, Utah, and all questions of extensive improvements by the company here will be decided by him."

The Oregon Lumber company refuses to give out the purchase price. The sale of the mill included 17,000 acres of timber land, all tributary to Hood River. This supply of timber is sufficient to keep the mill cutting 150,000 feet of lumber each day for 50 years or more. Big Strawberry Crop in Missouri. G. J. Gessling, secretary of the Hood River Fruit Growers' union, has received final estimates on this year's crop of strawberries in Missouri and Arkansas. This section of the country, says Mr. Gessling, will have 1,200 carloads as against 240 last year. This is the largest crop since 1897, when they had 1,500 carloads. Just what effect this will have upon Hood River cannot yet be determined. It all depends upon whether the Missouri berries are out of the way before the Oregon crop is ripe. As the season is very backward this will likely be the case. California will also produce a large crop of berries. Mr. Gessling says, so far, he has no fear that Hood River will not get good prices for this year's crop. This year's acreage in berries is 50 per cent greater than that of last season and now amounts to 750 acres which are capable of producing 80,000 crates of strictly first class berries.

Drowning of Russell Chase.

Russell Chase, a worthy young man, aged 26 years, from Palisade, Nebraska, met his death by accidental drowning in Wind river on March 24. He was in the employ of the Oregon Lumber company and at the time of accident was on or near a splash dam. The rushing waters must have caused him to grow dizzy for he suddenly fell into deep water beyond the reach of fellow workmen. It was thought that he was injured and rendered unconscious by striking timbers in falling. His body was recovered on Thursday. The facts of his death pointed so plainly to accidental drowning that a coroner's inquest was considered unnecessary. At the request of his bereaved parents, sent by dispatch, his body was brought to Hood River for burial. Deceased was well educated, industrious, and of exemplary habits. He was an active member of the Congregational church at Palisade, Nebr. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. L. Hersher in the Congregational church, Sunday afternoon, after which the mortal remains of this promising young man were laid to rest in Idlewild cemetery. Deceased is most highly spoken of by Mr. Lakin and family and Mr. Zolls and family who knew Mr. Chase well in Nebraska.
