Easily and quickly adjusted. Neatness combined with efficiency. The cost of this method is less than my wooden prop that can be bought. Wooden props are in the way of summer cultivation, irrigation, bauling, picking-in fact, they are always in the way. This support is out of the way of everything.

Remember

When you have these supports on your trees your propping is ended for years. No further trouble—and the first cost is cheaper than the cheapest.

These supports can be placed on the tree at pruning time or in the early spring at less expense and in a more satisfactory manner than when the limbs are heavy with fruitage.

The Kimball Cultivator

Is the one to use in all orchards. It is set feet wide. Very easy to guide. Has a fender which prevents striking the tree with knife. No hoeing of trees where used. Two horses used on it in orchard, or for destroying fern, pink, sorrel, oats, briars and Canada thistle has no equal.
