The weithere and perpetuity of this mation depends largely, if not wholly, upon the char-richer of its eliteenship. There is but little to rear from outside encroachment so long as rightcoursness prevails within her borders. Respect for God's laws as well as for the laws of men means much as a safegnard for us as a people, and the demand for men, and women too, who will stand for principle and right was never greater than at the present lime. Don't forget that you are individually s part of the strength or weakness of our nation, ac-ording to the value you place upon those questions which make for strength or weak-ness. Oregon's experience with forest fires last season should be warning enough to the public about being careful without the necessity of a governor's proclamation, says the Eugene Register. We want no such repetition of loss of life and property as we had last year.
