Hood River Glacier

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1903.

The Klickitat Review is a new paper at Goldendale, making the third paper in that city. O. C. Nelson is manager of the Review, and is getting out a neat and newsy paper. Just why this paper was started seems an unsolved puzzle.

The people of the Mount Hood settlement will be interested in H. C. Batcham's letter in today's Glacier. That long-talked of electric line up the valley is about due.

Notes of the Ogden Trip.

Hood River went after only one prize—a gold medal on apples—and got it, to be sure.

Hon. Thomas G. Hailey, or Tom Hailey, as his friends love to call the mayor of Pendleton, overheard two women discussing the display of big red apples from Hood River, and couldn't resist the temptation to get in a good word for Oregon. "Those apples must be painted," said one of the women. Tom assured them to the contrary, and went on to explain that there were carloads of such fruit in Oregon. He laid it all to the climate, and declared the Oregon girls, too, had just such rosy cheeks as the apples. "Why, put one beside the other and you can't tell which cheek to kiss."

Sam White, the genial chairman of the democratic state central committee, and his friend Tom Wright, the Union banker, were wending their way toward the fruit exhibit. In a vacant lot some live Ogden merchant had placed an unique bill board framed in the form of an elephant. Sam began to twit his friend about the failure of the G. O. P. emblem to recognize such a staunch republican as Tom Wright. The latter took it all good naturedly and awaited the chance to turn the cases. On their return they met a farmer leading a long-eared mule. "Now we'll see if he recognizes you," said Wright. The words were hardly out of his mouth before the mule made a bee-line for Sam, and it was all the farmer could do to restrain him (the mule.)

Formed of incandescent globes, and set between two huge mahogany pillars of the monster pipe organ in the tabernacle of the Latter Day Saints at Salt Lake are the letters U-T-A-H. And how significant it is. No historian can write of Utah and leave the Mormons out. The two are inseparable. To the traveler who stops off to visit the city of Zion, and to see the wonders of the Great Salt Lake, there is nothing to make him feel as if he were in a strange land. Everything indicates a thriving, industrious and wealthy American community. But the barren mountains on every hand and the sage brush in the untilled fields offer an ever-present reminder that the country was a desert land half a century ago. To the toil of the Mormons are due the green fields and templed cities of today. With the Mormons will rest the everlasting honor of pioneer work in the reclamation of the great American desert. They were the first American irrigators—the first people to transform a sage-brush plain into rich farming lands and happy homes. How unfitting, therefore, would it have seemed had that great movement for the reclamation of the arid West convened its first congress eleven years ago elsewhere than in Salt Lake City.

Little Miss Holliway presented the Glacier editor last week with a handsome boquet of flowers.

Attorney John Leland Henderson left Thursday morning to accompany his mother on her journey to her son Louis at Moscow, Idaho. Mr. Henderson will be absent four or five days.

John W. Kelly, an old typo and newspaper man, who set type with the senior proprietor of the Glacier on the old Portland Bulletin, 33 years ago, helped to get out this issue of the Glacier. Learning that the Glacier was in need of help, Mr. Kelly dropped his work at The Dalles and responded to our call. John is an old-timer that did us good to see again.

W. J. Lloyd, representing R. L. Polk & Co., directory publishers, is in Hood River. Mr. Lloyd is collecting data for Hood River's portion of a Wasco county directory his firm is preparing for publication. Full city directories will be given, and in addition to this the names of every property owner in the country districts. This ought to be a valuable book.

In past years The Dalles has experienced some inconvenience in connection with dock privileges, and is at present is in a tangle that will require some time to unravel. Hood River may well profit by the lesson The Dalles has learned in this regard. An effort is being made to give Hood River better facilities for reaching a boat landing on the river, and a few days ago $1,500 were subscribed by the residents of that city to build a wagon road from town to the saw mill, where a good landing can be had. It will be well for the people of Hood River, before they build a road, to stipulate that the dock be public, where all boats may land and receive and discharge freight and passengers. It is always a good thing when the people put in an improvement to be certain that they are going to derive some benefits therefrom.—Mountaineer.

The ladies' aid of the Congregational church will meet Friday afternoon with Mrs. H. F. Davidson.

Mr. Freshour and wife of Miami county, O., are in Trout Lake at present, visiting relatives.

Owing to the rain last week, the farmers were unable to haul all their hay. Some of it is badly damaged.

A fruitless search was made this week for the body of the Indian girl who was lost near the ice-cave November, 1902. The father of the girl thinks she was murdered.

Louis Powers of Trout Lake was badly injured while working in a logging camp on the Sound. One leg was broken and the other badly crushed.
