Our Population--- 1406. Dicken Mrs A J.

The Glacier man has made his annual round up of the number of inhabitants of Hood River and finds that the year 1904 begins with our population grown to 1406. This is the fifth census taken by the Glacier. Commencing with January 1, 1900, we had 622; 1901, 751; 1902, 861; 1903, 1091. The city has been carefully canvassed, and every house where the occupants were not known has been visited. The gain of 315 over last year shows a healthy increase, though some people may be disappointed, thinking the gain should be greater. Our population has been estimated as high as 2,000. If people estimated as high as 2,000. If people | Fay M, logger. | did not move from the town, with the | Fabric G R, employe Dav Fruit Co. newcomers constantly arriving we would soon have the 2,000 or more. Compare the directory given below with the one published a year ago, and it Fewel Ed, employe Elec Light Co. will be found that a good many famil- Ferrel Mike, logger. ies you know have moved away. Some have gone to the country, while others have left the valley entirely. The country is gaining in population faster than the town. This is to be expected. Our valley is known for its excellent fruit, for which the highest prices are paid in the markets of the world. Newcomers arriving come here to buy fruit land and to engage in fruit culture. There is no inducement for the average newcomer to locate in the town, however much it may be admired as a place of residence, if there are no means for earning a livelihood. In the summer season, at least during the strawberry harvest, our population is augmented by a floating body of people who are here today and gone tomorrow. The real population is here to stay winter and summer, therefore January 1 is a good time to make the count. The object of the census taker each time has been to get the exact number of our inhabitants. He counted none but bona fide residents, January 1, and was very careful not to miss any one who should be counted. The heads of families and given near as could be in the following DIRECTORY.

Hood River and Its Fruits. Capt. J. P. Shaw in Polk Directory. Our valley's rife with rural life Greet you where ere you go, Our cherries ripe, your lips invite, And big red apples grow.

Hood River valley is a gemall by itself. It lies in the northwestern part of Was-co county, 23 miles west of The Dalles, the county seat, and 66 miles east of Portland, on the line of the O. R. & N. the valley extending to the Columbia river on the north. This valley has an elevation of 200 feet at its northern terminus, and 1800 feet in the upper or southern part. Its width from east to west is from five to eight miles, and from north to south 20 miles. The tillable land will reach 50,000 acres, about me-fourth of which is in cultivation. The surface is gen-erally rolling, the elevated portions be-ing considered the strongest soil. The valley lies picturesquely environed between two mountain ranges that reach a general elevation of 2,000 feet above sea level. These ranges are spurs of the Cascades, and are fringed with fir and pine that present a pleasing Mount Hood, snow-crowned and ever eautiful, forms an impassable barrier to the valley's further progress to the south, while the mighty Columbia stops ts further extension to the north.

Hood river, a tortuous and ever restless stream, its icy waters flowing from glacial caves from under Mount Hood, divides the valley into East and West divisions. That portion lying east of the river being considered best adapt-ed to the growth of the apple, while the West Side is devoted to the raising of the far-famed Hood River strawberries. The soil of this side of the river is composed of a volcanic ash, thoroughly impregnated with iron oxides and mixed with a large percentage of decomposed sandstone. When water is once applied sandstone. When water is once applied to soil of this nature, the fruits grown upon it are as nearly perfect as can be raised in temperate zones. Water for irrigation purposes is brought into the valley by ditches and flumes, the water being taken out of Hood river, supplying the ranchers with water through lat-eral flumes. The soil on the East Side is somewhat varied in characteristics, being of a more clayey nature in some parts, while in other sections the same decomposed granite and volcanic ash is met with, giving to fruits raised here their superior flavor, color and ship. ping qualities.

It is not alone the chemical elements

the soil of this section contains that give superiority to fruits grown upon it, but the climate as well. Clear skies over head and balmy air just when fruits are ripening perform no small part in giv-ing to the world the finest apples that grow. The red on a Hood River apple is a deeper red, and the yellow on a Newtown is a richer golden color than is found elsewhere. Rub your hand over a Hood River apple, and you ob-(Confinued on Page 4.)
