

The Closing Out Sale N. M. ABBOTT.

Will be continued with the Cyclone Prices as Given in Last week's Glacier.

COUNCILMEN SAY GOODBYE

Monday was regular meeting night for the city council, and the last session for the three retiring members.

The finance committee's report on annual reports of treasurer and recorder marshal was accepted.

Councilman Mayes of the street committee stated that a sidewalk had been built along State street to the bridge, but that the work of all the property owners was not yet completed.

On motion of Blowers, a special committee consisting of Mayes and Prather were instructed to have the proper surveys and plats made and look after securing right of city to cross under O. R. & N. track.

As chairman of the police committee, Councilman Mayes called attention of council to certain people who permitted obstructions to remain on sidewalks and in the streets.

Chairman Prather of the special sewer committee had no new report for the year.

Mayor Coon's annual report was then read by the recorder. It follows in full: To the common council and citizens of the city of Hood River, I have the honor to submit the following statement concerning the affairs of the city for the year now ending.

In the general condition of affairs there have been both gains and losses which cannot be stated in terms of dollars and cents.

Councilman Blowers, as he placed his final O. K. on the last claim remarked: "We'll leave the treasury as President Buchanan did when he went out of office—with three cents in it, and they in a crack in the floor."

There were some desultory remarks about the road to the boat landing. Finally Mayor Coon announced that his honor and the Hood River Glacier were about to adjourn.

The proper motion from P. S. Davidson, and the final meeting of the retiring council came to an undramatic end. There was a general shaking of hands, and the city hall was emptied with every one in a jovial mood.

Life of W. T. Hansberry.

W. T. Hansberry died at his home in Hood River, December 30, 1903, after an illness of four weeks.

He was interred in Idlewild cemetery January 1, 1904. The funeral service was conducted by Elder T. W. Brampton at 10 o'clock at the M. E. church, and the services were concluded at the grave by the members of Canby post, Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Hansberry was born in Indiana, February 19, 1841. With his parents he moved to Wisconsin and later to Iowa.

During the civil war, in 1862, and the city hall was emptied with every one in a jovial mood.

He was enrolled in Company H, 32d regiment Iowa Infantry on August 4 of that year.

During his service in the civil war he was in the battles of Tupelo, Miss., July 14, Old Town Creek, July 15 and 16, Nashville, December 15 and 16, 1864, and Blakely, Ala., April 9, 1865.

He was honorably discharged from the service at Clinton, Iowa.

July 4, 1869, he was united in marriage to Eleanor C. Cook in Richardson county, Neb. Six children were born to them, the three eldest being boys, two of whom died when very young, while the family were living in Nebraska.

The oldest son died when 15 years of age and is buried in Kansas.

Mr. Hansberry was a member of the Advent Christian church for more than 30 years and was ever faithful to his convictions of right or wrong.

He leaves a wife and three children—Harry and Hattie Hansberry and Mrs. Dorrance Smith—to mourn his loss.

A kind, loving father and husband, a sincere and devoted Christian and a good neighbor, he will be greatly missed by those who knew him.

He fell asleep with the blessed assurance of eternal life at the Resurrection.

Hood River and Its Fruits.

Nowhere else has there been a spot of earth found where the apple, cherry and strawberry are grown, that can approach the matchless size, flavor and color of these fruits as sent over the country from Hood River.

The climate in this little paradise is all the most critical could wish. Here are no cyclones to carry away our houses, neither do the rigors of winter nor the stifling extremes of summer prevail.

The air comes laden from the mountains with sweet smelling fragrance of the fir and pine, giving health to the inhabitants as it spreads over the valley.

While this is not a damp climate, the precipitation is sufficient for most purposes. The weather bureau report for last year, 1902, was 41 inches.

Fine fir timber abounds in the upper valley, sufficient to supply the needs of the inhabitants for many years to come.

Gushing springs come from the foothills supplying the people with deliciously clear, cool water; this is especially true of the upper valley. Here, too, the soil is of the very best, and some of the best apples come from around the base of Mount Hood.

Unimproved lands in the upper valley sell today at prices ranging from $12 to $25 per acre, while improved ranches in the lower valley, that are planted to fruit and partially or wholly in bearing, command good prices, ranging up to $400 per acre.

Hood River shipped this season 100 carloads of strawberries that averaged the grower $1.65 per crate. An acre will yield, when properly cultivated, as much as 200 crates of berries. The cost per crate for cultivation is reckoned at 80 cents.

Apples do much better. A seven-year-old tree will yield from three to five boxes of merchantable fruit at nine years as much as 20 boxes. There are orchards in the valley that will yield 25 boxes per tree this season. Eighty trees are generally planted to the acre. A 10-acre tract, therefore, will have 800 trees, and at seven years old will yield three boxes to the tree or 2,300 boxes, and at eight years five boxes to the tree, or 4,000 boxes. At nine years old, these same trees, if they have been well cared for, can reasonably be expected to give the fortunate owner from 8,000 to 16,000 boxes of apples. If they are of the leading varieties they will sell for $1.50 per box. The entire crop of Newtowns and Spitzenburge of this season's crop sold at $2 to $2.30, and Yellow Newtowns brought $1.80 per box, while the growers got 85 cents for their Ben Davis.

HOOD RIVER METHODS. The city of Hood River is a pictureesque little town of 1,300 inhabitants.

It has nestled along the south bank of the matchless Columbia river, on the line of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, 66 miles east of Portland, at a point on the west bank of Hood river where that turbulent stream empties its waters into the Columbia.

The river itself is a marvel of wonder and beauty, from its source to where it mingles its crystal waters with those of the Columbia, and together they flow peacefully on to the sea.

The city is regularly laid out; has wide streets that are lined with oak trees—a species of that tree peculiar to the Pacific coast—with their wide spreading branches, under whose ample and inviting foliage restful moments may be enjoyed on a summer day.

On the south is a rise of 200 feet. Fringed along the gently sloping sides of this hill and facing the city and the Columbia, are groves of small oaks and pines, and hidden among these are some of Hood River's beautiful homes.

To the north, across the Columbia river in the state of Washington, stands Mount Adams resplendent in its beauty of perpetual snow, its heavy head piercing the sky at an elevation of 12,240 feet. Just at the foot of the city, its waters flowing westerly, is the broad expanse of the Columbia, its busy mart of steam and sail passing in panoramic view before the beholder.

This mighty flow of water is one and one-half miles wide at this point. Dwellings with well kept lawns fill up the resident part of the city. Churches conveniently located are a part of the moral force of the community.

Good school buildings are here and an opera house of ample size to accommodate theater goers occupies a prominent corner. Nearly all classes of business and trades are represented.

Substantial business blocks of brick and wood are a part of the improvements to be seen in progress.

The Hood River Glacier, a clean, new journal of eight pages, furnishes the news to its subscribers weekly; a modern cannery establishment handles the surplus fruit; a large lumbering plant with a capacity of 200,000 feet of lumber per day, as well as many smaller concerns, furnish labor for a large number of people.

Hood River is the home of the pomologist. Here many of the large apple and berry growers live, their orchards and berry fields bringing to them wealth and contentment.

As a health resort and place for a summer outing, Hood River is fast coming into favor. It can be reached from Portland in a couple of hours either by rail, or on one of the river steamers.

In the prosperous years to come, Hood River is destined to be a much larger city. What it sorely needs just now is a modern, safe, capital to build and equip an electric railway into the valley. Water for power and building material for construction are in abundance.
