

Wood River Glacier.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1904.

The irrigation proposition is progressing nicely. There are two committees at work. One, with headquarters at N. C. Evans' office, taking subscriptions for stock, and the other, consisting of Leslie Butler, N. C. Evans and H. F. Davidson is arranging loans for those who need it. Nearly 1300 shares of $30 each have already been subscribed for and subscriptions are being made quite rapidly. There is no doubt now but there will be a sufficient amount of stock taken to consummate the deal. Those who wish to subscribe for stock should go to the office of N. C. Evans, and those who have subscribed and wish to arrange for money to pay for same, should call at the bank or at the Davidson Fruit Co.'s office. It is hoped the farmers will come in as quickly as possible so as to enable the work to be commenced on the ditch at the earliest possible moment.

The second number of Vol. I of the new series of University of Oregon bulletins is from the pen of Professor Irving M. Glen of the department of English language and early English literature at the university, and consists of two studies in Anglo-Saxon poetry. The first is an outline of the story of Beowulf, beautifully told, and worthy preservation as a literary masterpiece.

The Ozark Apple Boom.

The splendid work being done by the immigration department of the "Frisko" system is having its effect on the entire Ozark section. Along the Springfield, Memphis line and the old Kansas City, Fort Scott & Birmingham road, values have increased during the past year fully 20 per cent. Where orchard lands were being for sale a few years ago today but few buyers can be found, commercial fruit growing occupying the attention of practically every land owner.

Leade county at present seems to be the busiest point on the line. Near Lebanon, the Frisko Orchard Co. is pushing its project with vigor. Although 20,000 trees are now set, 2,500 of which will bear the coming fall. The company expects a crop of 7,500 to 10,000 bins. In all this company has 5,100 acres through which a spur of the Frisko reaches the heart of the tract, thus solving the problem of hauling. The plans of the company call for packing sheds and a loading station in the center of the large property. The main planting will be of the Ben Davis, with great quantities of Golden Wonder and Payne's Keeper making up the list of varieties which will be grown.

The Frisco Orchard Co. will be one of the greatest advertisements for the Ozark regions ever attempted. The plan is extensive and set on a large scale. Eventually the company will have over 5,000 acres in one great apple orchard. When completed it will be one of the greatest sights in the Middle West and will mean a great deal to the people of the world in every sense of the term and will represent an investment of over $1,000,000. Already fruit growers in all parts of the country are watching its development closely.

The development of this mammoth orchard has called for careful management. Instead of being made a sinkhole for the company's capital from the outset every economy has been followed out even in the breaking of the land and clearing of timber. This fall over 100 cars of wood were cut and shipped to the nearby cities at a fine profit. Regular farming will be carried on methodically while the orchard is being planted so that the operating expenses will be kept at a minimum. This year the orchard of 1,000 trees is expected to bear a fine crop. An additional peach orchard of 2,500 trees is being planted. The peach crop will consist of a side line, together with other products of the farm all helping in the plan to keep down operating expenses until the apple orchards are in full bearing.

When one stops to figure what a 5,000 acre orchard means the magnitude of the thing then becomes apparent. Paper estimates of crops and possible crops, however, must usually be discounted by half, hence it is useless to even put down guesses at what the orchard can do for the farmer. But that is when the basis of 60 trees to the acre there would be a quarter of a million trees and on the lowest average of a barrel to the tree there would be 250,000 bins in a crop. Such a crop would fill 40 trains to St. Louis each. But that is when the whole orchard bears. If the company is successful in bringing half this acreage into bearing on a commercial scale, and there seems no reason why it cannot be done by 1908, the orchard will, even then, be the biggest fruit proposition in the world owned and operated by one management.

The Frisco orchard, however, is not the only large commercial orcharding company on the line. The Fort Scott & Memphis road. Near Marshallfield, Topeka, Kas., company has bought 2,000 acres. Already the company has put in an investment around $50,000, having built 37 houses for settlers and a side line which will be engaged in caring for the orchard. Where the Frisco people have put everything into trees and clearing up the property, the Topeka company has taken the other side and is building a veritable village at the outset. It is probable that stockholders of the Topeka company will personally see to the development of the orchard. The Hazelton orchard of 1,000 acres is another large company.

Scattered along for 60 miles, northeast of Springfield may be found scores of orchards varying from 20 to 100 acres each. From the car window the traveler gets the impression that he is looking into the heart of a new world within view of the train. Back from the right of way for several miles choice locations are being covered by small orchards, the general run being of 20 to 50 acres each. Practically every station shows an orchard here and there, sentiments as it were of what is to be made in the country.

A close census of the acreage already in apples and being set this winter would no doubt surprise even the best posted. When all of these orchards come into bearing, the Frisco can well afford to adopt the apple as a trademark and call this division at least "The Big Red Apple Route."

Unless all signs fail, within the coming five years this section of the Ozarks with Springfield as its western boundary, will become world famous. During the fall and winter whole train loads of apples will go out just as train loads of wheat and corn come out of Kansas. The cold storage houses at St. Louis, Kansas City and Springfield will hold but a portion of the crop. In the line of development as it is going on today there will be large storage houses located right in the heart of the main producing sections of the Ozarks and the "Big Red Apple" is the key note.

FARMERS BUY THE DITCH

The Wood River farmers have accepted the offer of the Valley Improvement Co. for the purchase of the big irrigating ditch on the West Side. If any one of the 300 men who filled the opera house last Saturday's mass meeting had any intention of opposing this move when he entered the hall, he was convinced the proposition was all right by the time the vote was taken, for not a dissenting voice was heard as Chairman Jayne put the question.

After the committee made its report with its recommendations, about an hour was taken up with explanations on certain points in the plan outlined. H. F. Davidson and N. C. Evans answered each question as it came up, and by the time the final vote was called for there was a clear understanding at least as to the general principles along which the whole scheme was to be worked out to a successful end.

The plan whereby the farmers are to become complete owners of the ditch is outlined in the committee's report, as follows:

We, your committee, beg leave to make the following report:

We find that the indebtedness of the Valley Improvement Co. to be on the 1st of January, 1904, $40,842.93. Cost of upper plant, $3,550.00. Original stock issued, 29,400.00.

Total, $44,392.93. We have secured a 10-days' option on $24,000 par value of this stock, and all debts outstanding to be paid, for $46,000; the rest of the outstanding stock at 30c on the dollar (273 shares) will cost $81,600—total cost, $127,600.

We would recommend that the option be taken up by supplementary articles of incorporation to be filed, placing value on each share of stock at $30; all stock to land owners only; said land owner signing contract which describes lands to be covered by such stock as a perpetual irrigation right; said contract to be placed on record. All maintenance and operating expenses and interest on company debt to be paid pro rata, according to the number of inches of water used by each stockholder and to be paid in advance for each year; no water to be sold to irrigate any land not covered by contract on which stock is held, except all cash present lease expires, after which no water will be sold to irrigate said land until owner has purchased stock and signed contract covering said land. All such contracts to pay in advance for all water used, with cash or note with approved security; provided that owner of leased land can take stock and sign contract at any time, then renter would pay pro rata for his water. We find that land owners can secure from the state of Oregon on first mortgage money with which to take the stock they may want at 6 per cent interest.

By this plan each person takes a share of stock for each acre of land to be irrigated as a perpetual water right; he then buys what water he may want each season for above-named land, and pays therefor the pro rata price for maintenance and operating expenses and interest, if any there be, for that season. E. N. BENSON, G. D. WOODWORTH, N. C. EVANS.

This option made by the Valley Improvement Co. expires at 6 o'clock Friday night of this week. That day will be accepted, settled, and as explained by Mr. Davidson, the farmers are allowed 60 days in which to raise the money. Governor Chamberlain was seen in Portland last week by members of the committee, and he assured them the state would be glad to loan Wood River farmers money from the school fund at 6 per cent. This will make it easy for those who lack the ready cash.

It is the intention of the promoters of this plan in purchasing the ditch to have the plant forever free from debt. All obligations, if any, will be upon the lands on which the water is used, thus making it absolutely impossible for any speculators to ever secure a lever on Wood River farmers.

It will require about $15,000 to put the ditch in shape to convey 2,500 inches of water. This, in addition to original cost, means a total outlay of $60,000, representing 2,000 shares of stock. As soon as a majority of the stock is subscribed, there will be a meeting of the stockholders, organization and the election of a board of directors with power to transact business.

Whenever the stock is all taken and more inches of water are needed, there will be a recapitalization, and eventually the whole of the West Side can be included in the non-dividend paying corporation. The cost of the water each year will depend solely upon the expenses of the ditch. It has been figured out that water this year should cost the farmers, including interest on mortgages, not over $3.50 an inch. To those able to put up the $30 an acre, their water will cost, says Mr. Davidson, probably not over $1.50 an inch.

Come, and Bring the Rest of the Family. Robinson, Kansas, Feb. 16, 1904.—Editor Glacier: Some time ago I read in the Glacier of some one having a large family. I forgot the name, but I can tell of a larger family. I am the oldest of 16 children, and one, the first of the family, died, making 17 in all. Sixteen of us are living. I will be 30 years old March 4, 1904.

I see some nice places advertised for sale in the Glacier. We expect to land in Hood River next September to make it a place for a man with small means to make a home.

The weather here is cold, the thermometer going down to 36 below zero. The ground is frozen two feet deep.

Find enclosed money order for $1.50 to renew my subscription. W. A. HALL.

The Appeal has brilliant hopes for Arlington and vicinity. It says: The Ralston Land and Stock Co. is the name of a new company being organized by a party of Portland capitalists. They have secured option on about 1,500 acres of land near Arlington, which they propose to irrigate with water from artesian
