T. C. Dalias complains that several boys about town have taken delight in fooling with the electric lights he has keep tevery night for the past year on his corner for the benefit of the public. In this time he has had to buy new burners because of the boys breaking the glass. At other times they have turned off the lights. Sunday night last the burner was again demolished, evidently by some one striking it with a cane gr a club, as the glass was scattered along down the sidewalk. Such malicious mischiel as this deserves severe punishment, and the boys will certainly get it if they persist in the contemptible work. Mr. Dalias donates this light for the public good, and should be protected if there is any law that will reach the perpetraters of such vandalism.
