"Sheriff J. D. Stuart, of Muscatine county, has been in communication with Sheriff Sexon, of Wasco county, Oregon, the place where the murders were committed. Mr. Evans Talks on Strawberries. N. C. Evans was interviewed by the Evening Telegram last Thursday as

N. C. Evans, a Hood River farmer and strawberry grower, at the hotel Imperial today, told the tale of a strawber y crop that this year aggregate 95,000 crates, stating that 110 full cars of berries, containing 600 crates each, were sent out from Hood River, and that express shipments amounted to between 25,000 and 27,000 crates. "This crop will easily reach 95,000 crates," said Mr. Evans. "Foet hill berries from as far as 20 miles from Hood River are coming in, and while the valley crop is of course ended, quite a few consignments daily

"It took 1,000 outside pickers to take off the Hood River crop," said Mr. Evans. "They came principally from Portland and the Willamette valley points. with 70,000 last year, the huge increase in acreage can be imagined.

The Dakotas proved the best buyers for Hood River berries this year. Montana was probably next in line, with Nebraska a good patron. Washington took more shipments than Oregon, a feature caused by the heavy demand from the three large cities of the Evergreen state. The most distant shipments went to the New England states, but consisted of only an isolated crate or two sent to friends. The Missouri valley constituted the eastern limit for commercial berries. commercial berries.

Surplus of Logs on Hand.

Mention was made in last week's Glacler that the Oregon Lumber Company had decided to close their logging camps up Hood river the first of July for three or four months and perhaps indefinitely. Since then loggers on the Lower Columbia attempted to form a combine to remedy the present disturbed condition as far as prices of logs are concerned. There seems to be a surplus on hand and prices are said to be too low for profit. Because of this be too low for profit. Because of this there is talk of a cut in price of wages. Paget sound loggers have already re-duced wages 50 cents a day. The low price for logs and lumber it is said may make it necessary for the Oregon mills

Norman Williams' Other Victims.

The Muscatine, Iown, Journal, of June 22, gives the following account of Norman Williams record in Iowa:

"Daniel Norman Williams, the supposed murderer of the Tumans, man and wife, north of this city, in a lonely hut in the Sheriy woods during the month of Agust, two years ago, will be hung at The Dalles, Oregon, July 22, for the murder of Miss Alma Nesbitt and mother, Mrs. L. J. Nesbitt, the jury at that place having convicted him of murder in the first degree and sentenced him to be hanged by the neck until dead for his awful crime.

A publication relating to the Lewis and Clark expedition, just issued by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, stands peculiarly alone. This edition is a two-volume, 8 vo one, called "The Trail of Lewis and Clark. 1804-1904." The author, Mr. Olin D. Wheeler, is the well-known writer of the popular Wouder-way, in connection with which he thade his studies and researches for this work.

Mr. Wheeler has traveled several thousand miles over the route of Lewis and Clark. He has camped out, climbed mountains, followed old Indian trails, and visited remote points made memorable by those explorers. Their route across the Bitter Boot mountains has been followed, identified and mapped.

"The Trail of Lewis and Clark" is illustrated in color and half tone from paintings, drawings and maps, by Paxson, DeCamp and Russell, made under Mr. Wheeler's direction, and from photographs taken specially for the purpose. The writer tells his own story and supplements it with pertinent extracts from Lewis and Clark, and a host of other historical and narrative writers that connect the past with the present. Exact excerpts and photographic reproductions, in half tone, from the original manuscript journals of Lewis and Clark are given. A chapter is devoted to the tongistal extremely and supplements it with pertinent extracts from Lewis and Clark, and a host of other historical and narrative present. Oregon Historical Quarterly.

The Quaterly of the Oregon Historical Society, for March, has reached the Glacier exchange table. Mr. Clarence B Bagley, an Oregon pioneer of 1852, who lived in Marion county up to about 1860, but who, for the most of the time since then has been identified with about 1860, but who, for the most of the time since them has been identified with the Pugit Sound press, gives a history of the "Moreer lumigration" —two cardions.

"An average price of about $1.50 per crate was realized by Hood River growers this year. The first crates of the season brought $5; the closing price was $1. The foot hill berries are bringing from $2 to $2.50. It coasts 1½ cents for packing. Counting in addition the price of crates and boxes, hauling and other incidentals; the expense of harvesting a crate of berries would perhaps average 75; cents per crate, leaving a profit of 75 cent ernor of California. In subsequent numbers of the Quaterly all of Gov. Burnett's "Reccolections" of his experiences in the "Oregon Country" will be published, thus making accessible a most valuable chapter in the earley history of our commonwealth. For further information about the Quaterly, address Geo. H. Himes, Asst. Sec., Oregon Historical Society, City Hall, Portland, Oregon.

J. Brown called at the Glacier office last Thursday and told of his narrow escape from death by fire a few days before. Brown was picking berries on the A. Butts place, and had made a hut out of fir boughs, in which he slept at night. One night he built a smudge hearby. He dropped off aslesp and about 11:30 that night he was awakened about 11:30 that night he was awakened by a loud crackling noise and as he opened his eyes he beheld the whole front of his hut ablaze. He hurriedly leaped through the door, and not a moment too soon, for in the next minute the whole interior of the structure was a mass of seething flame. Brown bore the marks of the fire on his face, where the flames had seorched him.

He was glad to have escaped with his life. The fire destroyed two suits of clothes and other things. He says the loss was $50. Brown says the mention of his trip to St. Louis was incorrect, but he does expect to leave shortly for
