Eccles, vice president of the Oregon Lumber Co., met with a serious accident while operating a cut-off in the big sawmill, Monday, shortly after noon. In some manner, the young man's hand became caught in the teeth of the saw and his fingers were taken off at the knuckles. The injured boy was driven in a carriage to the office of Dr. Dumble, where the wound was dressed by Dr. Watt and Dumble. Later in the afternoon the young man was taken to Portland, where he will receive treatment in the hospital. The physicians think there is a possibility of saving some of the fingers.

Hon. T. R. Coon, who advertises in another column of the Glacier that he has his home place for sale, is understood to be in New Zealand, this fall. Mr. Coon has been attracted to this British possession by a thorough study of the economical and sociological conditions of the country. If the country is as he has had it represented he believes he will find a place better even than Hood River. By leaving here in the fall he will arrive at New Zealand at the opening of the spring season. The climate in that country is about like it is here, possibly a little more like Southern Oregon or Northern California. It is about as far the other side of the equator as Oregon is north of the line. If Mr. Coon finds a suitable location in the insular province on the other side of the globe he deserves to succeed. His Hood River friends will wish him abundant success.

Robert McCartney has put in a claim against the Farmers' Irrigating Co. for $800 damages to his farm, caused by a small break in the irrigating canal a few weeks ago. The members of the board of directors went out to Mr. McCartney's place Sunday to view the damages. Mr. McCartney is not a shareholder in the Farmers' Irrigating Co.

ROUGH WINDS WRECK SPENCER

The Steamer Spencer was driven ashore on the sands, Tuesday morning, between Squally Point and Rowena on the Oregon side of the Columbia. A heavy gale was blowing at the time, and the Dalles City, who heard her distress signals could not reach the disabled steamer because of the high wind and rough water. The Spencer lies within 20 feet of the shore, with a large load of freight on board.

The pilot of the Dalles City when seen by a Glacier reporter said he thought the steamer must have met with some accident to her machinery and was thus forced to go onto the sands. He did not think it would be possible to pull the steamer off with another boat. She will in all likelihood have to be left off.

C. H. Strannahan and E. T. Wians, who were passengers on the Dalles City reported the log chains on the Spencer to be broken, and said that steam was escaping from the sides of the hull. They thought from appearances that the Spencer must be pretty badly injured.

It was at Lyle that the people on the Dalles City first noticed the distress signals of the Spencer. Every effort was made to reach the steamer, but the high wind and shallow water made this impossible. Captain Johnston was at the wheel when the vessel was wrecked.

Last winter the Spencer was lengthened 30 feet, and it is thought that the rough weather wrecked the hull of the steamer, and spread her steam pipes. If so, the boat is in a serious plight and will possibly be put out of commission for several weeks or longer. Only next Monday the Spencer Co. had arranged for the steamer to make daily round-trips between Portland and The Dalles.

Later information from the Spencer is that the steamer broke a hog chain and was forced to go on the sands. The passengers were taken ashore in small boats and transferred to the afternoon passenger train for Portland. There was aboard the Spencer a large supply of beef and beer for Hood River.

The little steamer Sadie B. made the trip in the morning but did not return in the afternoon.

Spencer Deck Hand Drowned. Lew Willis, a deck hand on the steamer Spencer, is supposed to have walked while asleep off the deck into the river last Saturday morning and was drowned. The young man was missing in the morning, while his clothes were in his bunk as he left them when preparing for the night. The accident happened while the steamer lay at the dock at The Dalles. It is said the young man was invited to go swimming the evening before, but he is said to have remarked that he could not swim. No one witnessed the tragedy.

Willis has been employed on the Spencer since she went into commission about two months ago. Prior to that he had worked on different boats plying on the Willamette and Columbia rivers. He was about 27 years of age and unmarried. It is believed that he came from Switzland originally, but he has made Portland his home for a good many years. He has no relatives here.

Strawberries are about out of the market and this week will find them nearly all gone. Strawberries sell at $1.25 to $1.50; raspberries, at $1.25; blackberries at 50c."

Berries Showed up Fine. A Cleveland, Ohio, dispatch in the Chicago Parker of July 2, says: "The first car of Oregon strawberries received in Cleveland, came June 21 assigned to the Gordon-Wonnell Co. The car was delayed somewhere en route and met with slow sale on account of home-grown crop coming in heavy. The quality of the fruit was fine, stock high and evenly colored, and a good shipping berry. The Gordon-Wonnell Co. predict a brilliant future for Oregon strawberries."

Perkins, thought some one had stolen from him while asleep under an oak, one night last week, on the road north of Paradise farm. The old papers had been found. The old fellow had worried constantly since their disappearance.
