

Hood River's Clark's Seedlings.

Hon. C. L. Smith, the well-known institute worker and editor of the Inland Farmer, recently visited Hood River and investigated the strawberry business. As he tells us, one of the things he was looking for was "the why of the wide fame of a medium-sized, rather sour, hard strawberry that was certainly inferior in size, productiveness and flavor to many of the popular varieties. While the investigation was diligently prosecuted along different lines, we found the situation no complex and the evidence so contradictory that the problem was not solved to our satisfaction.

"Did the strawberry make Hood River famous? Or did Hood River make the strawberry famous? Is the high reputation of Hood River berries due to the berry, the soil, the climate, the method of growing and marketing them? After a careful review of the entire field the writer inclines to the thought that a few men in Hood River have been able to intelligently combine a few ordinary factors, take advantage of certain opportunities—no way exceptional in character—and by a happy combination of these, with brains, energy and perseverance, have made Hood River and Hood River berries famous. Therefore that it is not the berry nor the place, but the men and the methods that have been the governing force."

There is no doubt that much of the fame of the Hood River strawberry is due to the people of that district. There is no other fruit-growing district in the Pacific Northwest which has shown so keen an appreciation of the value of advertising or so much enterprise and public spirit in securing advertising. But, with this admitted, we believe there is something to be credited to the climate and soil conditions of the Hood River section, and a great deal to the characteristics of the Clark Seedling strawberry itself.

The climate of the Hood River valley is about half way between those of the small-fruit districts west of the Cascade Mountains and those found in the valleys of the Columbia, Snake and Yakima Rivers (east of the Cascades). There is all the heat and sun in Hood River valley consistent with the production of the best shipping qualities in strawberries, and yet rarely the extreme heat in strawberries in which often softens the berries in the warmer valleys named. While temperature conditions west of the Cascades are usually ideal for the production of shipping berries, the varieties best adapted to long-distance shipments are a rule in varieties which require a sandy soil and the maintenance of a large supply of water in the soil. This is a combination of conditions which is rather rare west of the Cascade Mountains, and the west side berries which are most profitable growers are the larger kinds which flourish in clayey soils and yield immense crops of berries suitable to home markets.

At Hood River the sandy soils and irrigation ditches enable growers to secure crops of paying volume from the Clark's seedling, which in the vicinity of its place of origin near Portland yields less than one-fourth as much per acre as such varieties as the Magoon.

As to the merits of the Clark's Seedling strawberry itself we believe it may be justly claimed for it that, as grown and handled at Hood River at least, it is the best long-distance shipping strawberry known. This is a matter which has been demonstrated by the continuous success of Hood River in shipping strawberries to twice the distance that other growing points and yet having them arrive at destination in such fine condition that they outsell in price the best berries grown closer to such destination. The Clark's Seedling berry is not only firm but rich. While it is a sour berry even when ripe, we are of the opinion that chemical analysis would show that a ripe Clark's seedling strawberry contains more sugar than the sweetest strawberry grown and that its sourness is due to the large percentage of acid it contains. This combination of sugar and acid makes rich, heavy fruit and the Clark's seedling is one of the heaviest strawberries known, and that is the impression of those who have handled it. The liberal supply of acid acts as a natural preservative of the fruit. A feature which makes the variety valuable for shipping is its firmness, when just beginning to turn and will color beautifully in the boxes on its journey east. There are other varieties which share this quality with it, but comparatively few which develop so attractive a color and have a rich red flesh all through.

An incidental value of the Clark's Seedling is that it is one of the best varieties for canning. It retains its form in canning as well as the Wilson, and holds its fine color remarkably well in the can. Its richness also adds to its quality when canned. It is not probable that it will pay anywhere to raise the Clark's Seedling for canning purposes only, but it is probable that in time the Hood River canner will find it as profitable as high relative standing as the Hood River fresh strawberries hold today. The fact that the Clark's Seedling is an early berry is also a point in its favor.—Rural Northwest.

Spencer to Make Daily Round Trips. Beginning Friday, the steamer Spencer proposes to make round trips daily between Portland and The Dalles. By the new schedule, the steamer will leave Portland at 7 o'clock in the morning and make her return landing about 10 o'clock at night. Before entering this service, the steamer is undergoing an overhauling.

It is feared by many that the Spencer cannot make this daily round trip. The round trip to The Dalles has only been made regularly by one steamer, and then for only a brief period. Two years ago the Bailey Gate covered the distance both ways, and she carried nothing but passengers, and was enabled to keep up a fairly good schedule. Had she handled freight, however, as it is proposed to do on the Spencer, those who were in touch with the situation at that time, say that she would have been rated in the utmost. For this reason they believe that the Spencer is going to have it, if not more, than she can attend to properly.

Apple Outlook is Good. James Haaley, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Growers' association, writing in the Chicago Packer says: "At the earliest stages of the apple crop at the present season the outlook for an extraordinary harvest in the Middle West was very flattering. There was a great unanimity of expression from apple growers that the prospect for a great yield had never been better. The months, however, have caused a great modification of opinions. It has been observed that there was a great lack of vitality in the bloom and also that the several consecutive days of cold rainy weather at the time the bloom set, prevented a proper pollination.

It is not the desire to make a report that would be at all discouraging to either the grower or the buyer. It has been wisely said that the pessimist looks at the bloom that has fallen to the ground while the optimist looks at the setting of fruit remaining on the tree. If the apple yield all over the United States would average anywhere near an of apples probably enough for all purposes, hence the grower should not hold his crop at too high a price, neither should the buyer bankrupt himself in his eagerness to corner the market.

From The Rural Northwest. A car of cherries from San Jose, Cal., was sold at Chicago, June 29, which contained some Bings. They went at $2.75 per box, while the highest prices paid for any other cherries in the car was $1.30.

We notice a growing tendency even at Hood River to call the Clark's Seedling strawberry the "Hood River" strawberry. To do this is playing into the hands of growers of Clark's Seedling strawberries elsewhere, who are only too well pleased to have a good excuse for labeling their strawberry crates "Hood River Strawberries."

In California packers are offering $30 per ton for Bartlett pears, but are securing no contracts. A provision as to size failure to obtain contracts. Some Oregon and Washington growers who sign contracts without reading them found that the contract covered only a small portion of their fruit when delivering time came.

A Trip Through Yellowstone Park. Is what every one hopes to have—some day. It is the most wonderful trip in the world. There are more than 3000 square miles of weird, marvelous, unimaginable things that can be seen nowhere else, therefore if one ever sees them one must go to the Park. In the heart of the magnificent Rockies, the snow-tipped peaks all around. If Old Faithful geyser, a Palut Pool, Mud Volcano or Emerald Pool were to be found in Lincoln Park, Chicago; Central Park, New York; or Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, the people would flock to see it or them by tens of thousands. For a very small sum, comparatively, all these and hundreds more of Nature's unexploited marvels can be seen between June 1 and September 30 of each year, and one will enjoy, to boot, the best coaching trip in the country.

The Northern Pacific folder on Yellowstone Park, just issued, is a new, right up to date, finely illustrated description on this Yellowstone Park trip. It is not descriptive, but deals with the detailed, technical matters every one needs to know about such a trip. It tells all about the hotels, the stage coaches, the roads, the cost of the tour; where the geysers, the waterfalls, the bears, the raptures are, and where the trout fishing is found. We have printed thousands of this beautiful leaflet and want everybody interested to have a copy, which can be obtained by sending A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., 2 cents with proper address.

"Wonderland 1904," which is a very fine pamphlet of 116 pages descriptive of the Northwest, including the Park, will be sent for 4 cents.

Take State Census Next Year. Although the next federal census will not be taken until 1910, the state laws of Oregon provide for a decennial census to be taken midway between the government's enumerations. The next state census, therefore, will be compiled in 1905.

It is made the duty of the county assessors throughout the state to take the census in their respective counties, the work commencing May 10. Each assessor to ascertain the number of legal voters in his county, the number of males who are of age, the number under 10 years of age and the number between 10 and 21. He must also ascertain the number of females who are of age, the number under 10 and the number between 10 and 18.

It is also the assessor's duty to gather full information as to the agricultural products of the county, the number of acres under cultivation, the quantity of salmon taken during the preceding year and other statistics of commercial and industrial value. When the census has been completed, it must be copied by the county clerk and then transmitted to the secretary of state.

Raises Clover and Apples. R. R. Tucker, one of Hood River's successful apple growers, says he has found the growing of strawberries and apples not a successful combination. He prefers to raise apples and clover. Not that the strawberries are not profitable on his farm, but because he says he cannot give as much attention to the demand. Just when the berries are demanding his attention at harvest time, he finds he is too apt to neglect the spraying of his apple trees, and this is the season of the year when apples need the most attention from the pump, when the fruit is beginning to form.

Clover hay he says can be counted upon to net the farmer between $30 and $40 an acre. He counts on four tons of hay to the acre. One man can cut after five times the acreage of clover that he can of strawberries for the same cost.

Mr. Tucker has raised some of the finest Yellow Newtowns in Oregon. His fruit has taken a number of gold medals at the world fairs. He irrigates his orchard only in the latter part of the season as the trees require the water. Anyone familiar with trees, he says, will readily tell when the orchards need quite water. He then runs a small stream of water through his orchard, about six feet from the trees until the leaves are noticeably freshened up. An irrigated apple is juicier he says, and he believes keeps as well as the unirrigated apples. He gives his orchard water according to the requirements of the land, some of it taking more than others.

Bold Cougar at White Salmon. Dr. M. A. Jones, who was over from White Salmon, Saturday, tells a weird cougar story. Early in the week, Mrs. John Purser, hearing a disturbance among her chickens, went out to see what the matter. A few feet from her was a monster mountain lion. The chickens were too lively for the cougar, and he was unable to get hold of any of them. Failing in this he leaped upon a log near by and coolly surveyed the situation. Switching his tail about, it was several minutes before he trotted off to the woods.

The next day the cougar was seen again in the canyon behind the Jewett hotel. At another time some of the farmers' cattle were chased by the hungry monster. No one lost anything.

Finally, a hunter's house was made up, and headed by Moricena Jones a chase was begun up the canyon. A pack of hounds soon found the trail, but the cougar had a couple days' start and the chase proved fruitless. The trail of the cougar followed up the canyon and then over the hills toward Lyle. Last year it is said that a farmer's boy at White Salmon came near being captured by a cougar. The child was playing in the yard near the house, when his dog aroused him to the impending danger, and he had time to run for home before the animal caught him.

New R. F. B. Regulations. Patrons of the rural free deliveries, who wonder why carriers are prohibited from doing express work on the side, should read the following orders, issued June 8 by H. C. Payne, the postmaster general: "The act of congress making appropriations for the service of the postoffice department for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1904, in connection with the appropriation for the pay of rural carriers, provides that: "On and after said date (July 1, 1904) said carriers shall not solicit business or receive orders of any kind for any person, firm or corporation, and shall not, during their hours of employment, carry any merchandise for hire; provided, that said carriers may carry merchandise for hire for and upon the request of patrons residing upon their respective routes, whenever the same shall not interfere with the proper discharge of their official duties, and under such regulations as the postmaster general may prescribe."

In pursuance of the above provision of law, it is ordered: That no carriers are now permitted to solicit business or receive orders of any kind for any person, firm or corporation, no mail matter may be handled by rural carriers while serving their routes, unless the proper postage has been prepaid, with the single exception of county newspapers, which, under the law, are permitted to be carried free throughout the county in which they are published, to actual subscribers, and such newspapers addressed to subscribers, residents on rural routes, must be deposited at the postoffice the same as papers for other subscribers.

The hire for merchandise carried on request of the patron of rural free delivery must be paid by the patron. Carriers will not be permitted to receive any compensation from the seller of such merchandise.

Articles or packages, which are mailable, which are handed to the carrier or deposited in the postoffice or in a rural letter box or in a collection box located on a rural route, with request that the rural carrier deliver same, are subject to the rules regulating mail matter, including the payment of postage thereon.

Articles or packages, that are not mailable, which the patron desires the rural carrier to carry must be delivered to the carrier in person, and in carrying merchandise for hire rural carriers are not permitted to leave their routes as officially laid out or to accept anything that will in any way interfere with the efficiency of the service.

Carriers, who are not permitted to carry spirituous liquors either for themselves, for sale, or for the accommodation of their patrons. Rural carriers are required to permit postoffice inspectors, or other duly accredited agents of the postoffice department, to accompany them on their regular trips over their routes. They must not carry other passengers nor permit any person, other than authorized postal officials, to ride with them or to carry mail.

Rural carriers must not engage in any business during their prescribed hours of service, or conduct any business after hours which offers the temptation to solicit patronage on their routes, or which, by reason of their position in the government service, gives them special advantage over competitors, such as book canvassing, soliciting insurance, selling sewing machines or other kindred occupations.

Carriers must not, either in person or through others, directly or indirectly, by any method whatever, solicit money, gifts or presents; nor issue for profit, souvenirs or postal handbooks, nor co-operate with or assist the publishers of any directory, or other publication of the public; nor compile directories for public use or assist publishers to compile them; nor furnish the names and addresses of patrons of their routes, for any favor, to any business establishment, or to any individual, except to those departmental officials, who, under the regulations, are entitled to the same.

Picnic at Collins Landing. The following party boarded the steamer Bailey Saturday last Thursday and spent the day at Collins Landing. Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Parkins of The Dalles, Colonel and Mrs. O. B. Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Hartness, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Kunn, Major and Mrs. J. S. Booth, Francis Gilbert and Miss Agnes Ingelbren.

The party took their stringed musical instruments along, and played under the shade of the big fir along the bank of Collins creek. Afterward they were invited to spend the afternoon at Captain Belcher's home, where the musicians entertained the guests. Lunch was partaken of in picnic style, and all report they had a fine time, in fact never had a better.

Collins is a splendid place for such outings. The hotel there is well furnished and is liberally patronized. The party returned the same day on the Regulator.

One Lady's Recommendation. I have, I believe, sold 50 boxes of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets on the recommendation of one lady here, who first bought a box of them about a year ago. She never tires of telling her neighbors and friends about the good qualities of these tablets. The pleasant purgative effect of these tablets makes them a favorite with the ladies everywhere. For sale by all druggists.

Brutally Tortured. A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Grobeloff of Colusa, California, writes: "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine I ever used. That trouble, a few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Chas. N. Clarke, the druggist.
