Ralph says he has been putting in the time faithfully improving his ranch this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Blowers and Aubrey Blowers returned last Friday from the week's visit as Portland and Newport-Yaquina-day. Mr. Blowers says they spent only one day at Newport and that was enough for him. He went down here to cool off, and found it so uncomfortable cold that he had to spend the time beside a fire. The fog he says remains over the town until noon, and along about five in the afternoon the sea breeze springs up and the weather is very cool. In Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Blowers visited their son, United States Deputy Marshal L. N. Blowers and his family. Mr. Blowers thinks the city a pleasant place, but prefers Hood River to anything he saw on the trip.

John Leland Henderson received word last Friday that his mother in Chicago was much worse and not expected to survive her illness. Mr. Henderson left that night for his mother's bedside. Mrs. Henderson's second son, Professor Louis F. Henderson of Moscow, Idaho, is also with her. The mother is 86 years old.

Invitations are out announcing the marriage of Miss Josephine Peyton Kimball of Superior, Wis., to Edwin Corydon French Knowles of Hood River at the home of the bride's mother on the afternoon of Wednesday, July 27. Mr. Knowles is comparatively a new comer to Hood River, he having purchased the Axtel Rahm property last April.

Ben Teal of New York city and sister, Miss Clara Teal, of Portland made a short visit to Hood River last week and lunched at Pinehurst Wednesday. Mr. Teal is a prominent and popular man in theatricals. It was he who staged "Ben Hur," which is one of the most difficult plays ever known to have been staged. R. L. Sabin of Portland has taken charge of the store and contents as agent for the creditors.

J. H. Woodrum of 23 California street San Francisco, writes to Leslie Butler saying that he noticed by the United States geological survey reports that bloodstones have been found at Hood River. Mr. Woodrum is desirous of securing some of these specimens. If any of the Glacier readers know of any bloodstones being found in the valley they may find it to their advantage to correspond with the gentleman.

Mordcael Jones of Husum was in Hood River last Thursday. Mr. Jones reports having bagged a large brown bear last week. A cougar had come down from the mountains and had molested a neighbor's band of sheep. Jones and his bounds spent half a day on the trail of the mountain lion, but were unable to overtake the beast. The dogs ran onto a bear, he says, and within five minutes after they began to bark, Bruin was tread and shot.

Davenport Lumber Co. have closed their cord wood sawing to the risk of fire during the summer months. J. R. Phillips had charge of the Davenport Bros.' wood camps this year, and turned out about 6,000 cords of first-class wood. This has all been burned to the company's side track at Badger, which is being loaded on cars for points in Eastern Oregon. Wood is cheaper this year than last season. Frank Davenport, jr., of the Davenport Bros. Lumber Co., says his company is getting $2.50 a cord this summer.

Meigs Bartness, who was graduated last June from the Oregon Agricultural college at Corvallis, is home for his summer vacation. Meigs was with the O. N. G. at American lake. He says he had been rusticated in the mountains a couple of weeks before the encampment and was much better prepared for the hard marching the troops were subjected to, than were most of the boys. Some of them were pretty well played out by the hard campaigning. Meigs says he enjoyed the glass work and to get home. He has been offered a position as instructor in the Hill Military academy at Portland, but has not decided just what he will do the coming year.

The gangs of tramps that daily pass through the city on the west-bound trains are really astonishing to those not acquainted with the migratory habits of this class of individuals, who are constantly looking for new fields in which they can make a living by burglary, begging or any other device, says The Dalles Chronicle. Work would be the greatest punishment that could be inflicted on them. The marshal counted 14 on the tops of the passenger coaches of the early morning train today.

A. G. Barber, of Logan, Utah, father of Mrs. Ona Davenport, arrived last Friday, being called here by the death of his little granddaughter. He voted for the $5,000 appropriation his state made for the Lewis and Clark expedition, and being interested in the fair went to Portland Sunday to see just what progress the project is making. Mr. Barber was one of the citizens of Logan who so hospitably received and entertained a party of 500 delegates from the national irrigation congress at Ogden last September. A number of Hood River people remember well the occasion.

Dr. Thomas Condon, professor of geology at the University of Oregon, Eugene, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. R. S. Bean, arrived last Thursday and crossed to White Salmon, to visit Dr. Condon's son, Seymour W. Condon. Mrs. Bean returned the next day. Dr. Condon, though over 83 years of age, continues to retain his vigorous mental faculties unimpaired.

The Pacific Coast Nurserymen, who met in Hood River recently and invited the American Association of Nurserymen to hold their meeting in 1905 in Portland, are doing a great work for themselves and the state at large by thoroughly discussing the questions relating to the nursery business, getting into the closer touch with each other and working to get up horticultural interest.—Pacific Farmer.

Articles of incorporation were filed last week by George W. Johnston, T. H. Johnston and W. A. Johnston, of Dufur, incorporators. The name of the corporation will be Johnston's capital stock, $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $50 each. The object is to operate a general merchandise business in the town of Dufur and to own buildings and grounds in connection therewith and necessary and convenient therefor.

On visiting a tract of land for the first time in several years, H. R. Kincaid of Eugene found that timber and brush had grown up nearly all over the land, in some places trees large enough for telegraph poles, bridges or wharf piling, or saw logs, growing on land where he plowed and raised wheat and garden vegetables 50 years ago. Nearly all of the 350 acres is covered with a dense forest of new fir and oak timber and brush that has grown up since the donation claim was settled on by Thomas and Nancy Kincaid in 1853. There are thousands, perhaps tens of thousands, of cords of wood now growing on the land.

Robert Leasure made an early morning trip from Mount Hood, Monday. It's warm in his part of the country, says Mr. Leasure. Irrigating the hay crop consumes most of the time of the farmers there. There would be plenty of water for all, says Mr. Leasure, if the people divided up equally. They expect to have this matter better adjusted another year. When asked how Parker would run in the Mount Hood settlement this fall, Mr. Leasure remarked that he didn't think he would. Mr. Leasure has been a stalwart democrat all his life and a warm admirer of the publisher of the Commoner, but he says he is undecided about supporting the resident of Esopus. If he were a voter in a doubtful state he would re-consider the democratic nominee. Mount Hood is now strongly republican in its political views.

Work of getting the steamer Spencer back into the water from the sands where it was beached two weeks ago is found to be a big job. The boat will have to be moved 700 feet from where it now rests before it will strike water sufficiently deep to float it. A force of men is at work building ways from the boat to deep water, but progress is naturally slow, and it will probably be two weeks before the boat is floated. It will then be taken to Portland for repairs. An examination of the boat shows that very little damage has been done, and when it is once again in the water it can be repaired in a short time.

Jim Langille, accompanied by Mr. Sonnickson, left Monday morning for his gold mines on McGoy creek. They were to be joined by a man whom Montecia Jones of Husum is to send out a man to assist in working his and Langille's claim. This is the year Jim should strike it rich. Last summer Ed. Fewel helped him sink a 90-foot tunnel.
