

TO PUT WATER ON THE HILL

Water for residents on the hill seems now an assured fact. Long ago was this promised. Many people bought land on the hill expecting to be able to build with the assurance that they would soon have the convenience of hydrant water to all parts of their house.

are payable before the last Monday in December each year, and if not paid on that date a penalty of five per cent is added.

Delinquent list is published on the 15th of January each year and if not paid before three weeks, enough of the land will be sold to pay the taxes due with costs.

The land sold can be redeemed any time inside of 12 months. No assessment shall be levied in excess of enough to pay current expenses and interest on the bonds until ten years have elapsed, then each year in addition to interest and current expense, there shall be enough larger assessment to take up the bonds becoming due each year.

Board shall have power to cross any stream of water, street, road, ditch or flume or any state land in building the ditch.

The board has the power to call special election to vote more bonds if they find they have not enough to complete the ditch. Takes majority to carry the bonds.

Want an Irrigating Ditch. C. F. Waldo was over from White Salmon Saturday. Mr. Waldo says the people on the flat at White Salmon are determined to secure irrigating water.

A meeting of interested citizens was called the first Saturday in this month, at which time a committee consisting of Mr. Clyde, who is an engineer, R. Adams and Captain Cook was named to investigate the various sources from which water can be secured, the amount of water that may be obtained from each, and the cost of getting the water onto the farm.

This committee is to report at the call of the chairman, Captain Cook. At this same meeting the proposition of a cannery was discussed. A committee consisting of A. H. Jewett, Judge A. R. Byrket and Seymour W. Condon were named and have been conferring with a cannery man from The Dalles who is to meet with the White Salmon people and place before them a proposition whereby the farmers of the north side of the Columbia will be enabled to find a place where they can get rid of fruit at a sure price.

As the farmers of White Salmon can grow a fine quality of vegetables, pears, cherries and other fruits it is thought that this will be an inducement to outside capital, with a certain amount of help from the people of White Salmon, to put in a cannery plant at that point.

This committee that is looking up the cannery proposition is also bringing into the question of a union or organization of the White Salmon fruit growers, so Mr. Waldo says. It is not the intention of the White Salmon people to go it alone in shipping their fruit, as was stated last week, but the idea of a union is for the purpose of getting into better touch with the markets. It is the intention of those interested in the movement, says Mr. Waldo, to have an agent in Hood River who will be able to give the shippers some information as to prices each day and the condition of the markets, not only in the shipment of strawberries, but for tomatoes, cherries, or anything the growers there have to export.

The White Salmon people want to be able to get daily market reports on all the fruit they have to ship. Now they are so far from the railroad shipping point that they are in ignorance of the true market conditions. They expect to continue as before in marketing their shipments through the Davidson Fruit Co., and the Hood River Fruit Growers' union.

Mr. Waldo says he has one of the finest cherry orchards in the state of Washington. If the newspaper man can find one to equal it he has promised a new hat for him. The trees were set out a year ago last spring, and have surpassed all expectations as to growth. Last year they put forth vigorous roots, and this year there are any number of the trees, says Mr. Waldo, that it would require a ten-foot pole to reach to the top of.

and will take the water in the mountains in the vicinity of Sleeping Beauty. Water will be delivered to the many homesteads that are scattered to the west and in the vicinity of the lava and ice caves. No mutual arrangement, of course, could handle such a proposition, as a canal 18 feet wide and five to eight deep will be required to supply water for irrigation to these homesteads, but it is said the persons who are working on the scheme will push it through to completion.—Oregonian.

Will Lay Tile Drains on His Ranch. F. W. Angus was in Portland and McMinnville last week, where he went to look after tile draining for his farm.

Mr. Angus found that it is necessary to buy four cars of tiling to get the low rate offered for the terra cotta, so Mr. Angus has placed an ad in another column of the Glacier, calling attention to those farmers who expect to put in tiling this fall to see him before next Saturday.

Mr. Angus finds that the tiling can be purchased for 15 cents for the 3-inch, and 20 cents for the 4-inch. This is 1.0. b. at McMinnville. The freight to Hood River will amount to about 13 cents a hundred feet, he says.

Mr. Angus expects to lay about 3,000 feet of tiling this fall. He aims to put it in before the rains interfere with digging. The pipes are laid in ditches about three feet deep. The man should dig about 100 feet of ditching a day, says Mr. Angus.

The tiling is found to be a necessity now that there is so much irrigating water turned loose in the valley. Mr. Angus put down drain pipes in his orchard last year and says the land there this year is kept in fine shape. The soil is always mellow and moist, and produces splendid crops.

The Enemy Had Hot Feet. Our editor, who, with his family, are residing out at the Oakdale ranch, went to the blackberry patch one evening last week to gather some berries for his breakfast the next morning. Incidentally or accidentally, (and he is falsely accused of having instinctively interviewed a community yellow jacket.) He found them all at home, energetic, aggressive, pushing little fellows, in fact, he says the few individuals who suspended their regular work long enough to receive the Glacier's interviewer, pushed to hard to get the best of the would-be horticulturist who is trying to operate the ranch, and who was with the editor when the incident or accident occurred seems to be the only one present who thoroughly enjoyed the situation. To him it appeared from the language and actions of the parties interested, that they were attempting to combine the performances of a high class circus with the theological instructions of an up-to-date Sunday school, and with remarkable success they executed application of ammonia and soda bicarb to the punctures made by the little beligerents soon relieved the wounded feelings of the unfortunate quilldriver, until he felt sympathetic, but he had received the attention of one of his assailants which had followed the newspaper man in his foot race to the house 100 yards away. But now comes the most mysterious episode of this entire bit of history. The assailant would be horticulturist went in person, two or three evenings later, to deliver his ultimatum to the beligerents, either to make due reparation and disavowal of beligerent intentions or it would devolve upon the power that he represented, the avenging the wanton breach of neutrality. Arriving at the locality the diplomat found that his action had been forestalled, that some enemy had razed the entire fortification of the yellow-jackets, appropriated their stock, young and old inhabitants, in fact, leaving nothing of the entire community but the empty cells and perhaps a half dozen individuals who were probably doing scout duty at the time of the attack, and these members of a once prosperous and pugacious community of pit propagators, who seemed to have troubles enough of their own for once, and were too dazed to pick up a scrap with a new intruder. The editor declares that the necessity he had gained all the information he desired regarding that particular community, and could not have been induced either by bribes or desire for revenge to make such a vigorous assault. What this historian wants to know, and that which prompted the writing of these tragic events is "Who stole the dillings." In other words, will coons, skunks, hedges, or other predatory night-providers do such effective work in the destruction of these pests? If any one can speak with authority and name the individual it would most likely save the fruit growers of the valley hundreds of dollars in spoiled fruits to ask of our Commercial and Development league to use their influence to encourage the immigration of this class of inhabitants.

Cholera Infantum. This disease has lost its terrors since Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy came into general use. The uniform success which attends the use of this remedy in all cases of bowel complaints in children has made it a favorite wherever its value has become known. For sale by G. E. Williams, the druggist.
