

HOOD RIVER GLACIER. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1904.

FRUIT FARMS

The Glacier man dropped over the Booth hill last Thursday morning and found J. P. Hillstrom at work on his ranch burning out a few stumps and completing a ditch to drain off the sewage water that runs down from the Boone ditch on the flat. Mr. Hillstrom has a fine ranch of 200 acres, about 80 acres of which is in cultivation. For lack of water he is not getting the best results in either orchard or grain, but will endeavor to bring water in as soon as he can. On the bottom land is a deposit of fine brick and pottery clay that ought to be the location of a big industry. Mr. Hillstrom moulded a piece of the fire clay for his stove and used it for seven years, a pretty good test of its value. This clay would make a fine quality of the drain, pottery and brick. There are apparently several grades of clay that could be put to use in that line, and it covers a large area of ground. Mr. Hillstrom will set out a new orchard of six acres next spring, and has two acres of young orchard now. His old orchard is not composed of the best varieties, and will be abandoned.

O. H. Rhoades is building a new hay shed to take care of his increased acreage, and his quarter section is being improved every year. His land is under the Boone ditch and is producing very satisfactory results.

Calkins, Fellows & Co., a Portland firm, are improving a quarter section east of the Rhoades place, and have named it "The Orchard." They have six acres of orchard set out, and are clearing the land as fast as possible.

J. M. Lonsdale and Mr. Rhoades and has a fine place with about 15 acres cleared, mostly in hay. He is cutting clover amounted to 36 tons of nine acres.

J. R. Steele is one of the progressive Mount Hood farmers, and in addition to taking care of 15 acres of his own land, mostly in hay, has rented the Paul and Louis. Six places adjoining, cultivating the hay land. He expects to put up 100 tons of hay this season, and will winter several head of stock.

M. Dumas has a large ranch of 250 acres, of which about 90 acres are in cultivation, and the most of it in hay. He has four acres of orchard and two of strawberries. Mr. Dumas is building a new house on the main road, and will probably get his brother out from France to take part of his farm. Among the interesting experiments being made by Mr. Dumas is a patch of strawberries that bear continuously until the frost kills the vines. He brought over five plants from France, but only one lived. From this one beginning he now has a patch of about 20 feet square, and next year will have a commercial patch of these berries. He has enough this year to supply his table two or three times a week all summer. The berries are of fine quality, and will be very profitable for market long after other berries are gone. He is endeavoring to get raspberries from France that will bear continuously, and brought over some plants last year, but they did not survive the journey. His pumpkins, raised from seed from France, are the finest he has seen this year. Belgian hares and rabbits are raised for the table and his large rabbit shed was also the home of a flock of wild geese last winter. With the opening of spring he turned them out, but expects them back the first deep snow. They became quite tame and showed no desire to leave last winter when the snow covered the ground. The head of French snails is one of the most interesting products of the Dumas ranch. A bed about 20 feet long is closed in with wire netting, and little rock piles and board shelter are placed at intervals in the pen. Lettuce, cabbage and other green stuffs are planted for feed, and the snails work around in and out of the rocks and boards and multiply and grow fat. The place is kept damp during the dry season, and that is about the only care necessary. The snails are about 1 1/2 inches in diameter, and are a French delicacy being served similar to oysters. Mr. Dumas assured the writer that they were worth about 75 cents a dozen in the Portland market.

L. Ufferty is working the Ruhnke place of 200 acres, and cut about 40 acres of hay this year. There is also a 5-acre orchard on the place.

E. C. Miller is clearing up his ranch and has nearly 10 acres in cultivation. He put out 500 blackberry plants last spring, which are doing nicely.

H. C. Rusk is very pleasantly situated on 100 acres opposite the Davenport mill, and has a very attractive home. He has ten acres of hay, two of orchard and one of berries.

John Vauthiers has 40 acres left of the old Graham ranch, and is making a fine showing. He is clearing a large piece of ground out to the main road, and setting out a good-sized orchard. This land is located the famous cold spring, which is liberally patronized by the travelers along the road.

Paul Albert purchased 104 acres adjoining Mr. Vauthiers on the Graham ranch, and is improving it. He has about 22 acres in hay and a small orchard in bearing, besides setting out a new orchard of good varieties. Some of the finest peaches in the valley are just getting ripe on this ranch. His young trees are making a fine showing.

W. S. Griddle, one of the storekeepers and postmaster of Mount Hood, is having his ranch cleared and putting it into cultivation.

A. Laronx is located about half a mile east of the main road, and raises some of the best berries in that district. The Boone ditch goes through his place and gives him plenty of water for his land.

James Davidson came from Ohio last year and started to improve his claim south of the Mount Hood store. His improvements are of a substantial kind, and will make the ground work of a substantial ranch. With the help of his two boys he is clearing up the land, setting out apple trees, and is contemplating setting out a peach orchard on the west slope of Bald Butte, which rises up 2000 feet from his house. A fine spring up the canyon from his house affords irrigation about six inches of water, which will irrigate quite a piece of ground about the house. The Boone ditch passes along the lower side of his ranch and is not being used by him at present. He is using a portable fence of his own manufacture, and instead of holding it up by means of posts, is anchoring it to cordwood with baling wire, and this makes the fence portable in every sense of the word. At the time of the Hoopner flood a large volume of water came down the canyon and deposited about ten inches of soil on a gravel bed below his house, and has made him a fine clover patch on what otherwise was worthless ground.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured. With local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased tissue, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It is prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best medicines known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The effect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

EARLY LAND MARK IN HOOD RIVER.

The old building on the corner of Second and Oak streets, now being moved up the street to make room for a two-story brick Dr. F. C. Brosius is erecting in its stead, was one of the early land marks of the city.

The building was erected by Contractor George T. Prather in the summer of 1882, for Frank Backus, who opened the first drug store in the town of Hood River. Backus later sold his drugs to Dr. C. F. Newcomb.

Judge Prather, in 1885, bought the store and building from Mr. Backus and enlarged on the stock, keeping for many years a general store. The judge was a good democrat in those days and held the position of postmaster for four years during the first Cleveland administration.

It was in this building that the Hood River Glacier was conceived and brought to a reality. The judge arranged with the old Waco Sun at The Dalles to print the paper, a little 5-column folio, while George energetically gathered the news from this end. The first issue appeared July 14, 1889. George Prather was a Washington land press, some type, and put up an office at Hood River, on the ground now occupied by Jackson's store. The building still stands, it being the Jackson residence State street.

Mr. Prather went out of the store business some time in the early 90's, and in 1901 he sold the property to Dr. Brosius for $3000. Prather bought the lot, 100x50, in 1885, for $800, which was considered a good price at that time and is one of the best business corners in town.

The South Bend Pilot says: The following letter will be of interest to our readers in Pacific county who formerly knew and held the writer and her husband in high esteem. These friends will be glad to learn that Mr. Knapp has built up a large and profitable business in Hood River, his stock consisting of footwear, clothing and furnishing goods. The Pilot hopes to frequently in the future. We might add here that Pacific county has no demerits to spare even for so landable a corner as Hood River. Hood River friends are content with Hood River strawberries and Hood River apples and leave us the luxury of at least a few demerits:

Hood River, Or., Aug. 5.—Editor Will: Harbor Pilot: Hood River is not exactly in your local news district, but we claim so much notoriety for our scenic beauty and also for our famous fruit that we feel we must be known everywhere, and to be known is to have friends. These friends may read a few lines from here with interest.

Picturesque Hood River! A home fit for the gods! You that have seen its beauties know my wisdom in not attempting a description of Columbia river scenery. Hood River has always been recognized but our resources have come into prominence within the last eight years. Even six years ago friends in Portland emphatically advised us not to go to Hood River, we were not to live on scenery, but we had fallen victims to her charms and thought we would try our luck, adding a few of the substantial to the scenery diet. Since that time the town has trebled in population, real estate values are ten times as high as they were, and Hood River is more widely known throughout the world than any other place in Oregon. No doubt there are other towns with greater resources than we have that are never heard of outside of the state in which they are located. The obvious reasons for this is the great value of fancy fruit as an advertising medium.

We have been much interested in the political news of Pacific county. We are spared the nervous strain of political contention, we are not in the republican, democrat, or socialist line, and we are not in the line of the political persuasion that the republicans, democrats, or socialists move here to give our political life a little of the spice of variety, you know.

Whilom South Bend residents here are all doing nicely. Bert Kent claimed a popular Hood River girl for his bride recently. Charles Foster is also nicely settled in his own home. Both young men are members of the Hood River Growers Association. Mr. Gorking's family is nicely located on their fruit farm near town. Mr. Soble, formerly of Waco, is one of our business men, and is doing nicely.

We read of South Bend's many improvements with pleasure, and to confess the truth, get very homesick "in the good old summer time" for the ocean breezes and the blue, blue skies of Pacific county. Yours respectfully, Mas. S. A. Ksarr.

Praises Active Hood River Apple Union. The Hood River fruit-growers believe there is something in the value of a name, for according to the Glacier, the Hood River Apple Growers union request that you place a name on your choice lot of apples because the buyer insisted that his own name go on the box labels. The Hood River growers have spent thousands of dollars advertising their fruit and they do not propose to allow outside swarms to steal their name. And they are wise, for if they allowed dealers to place their names on Hood River boxes it would not be long until unscrupulous dealers would be long in the land, and the Hood River name would lose the prestige it now has in the markets of the country, and Hood River growers would sell no better than William's variety of apples. The name of the Hood River growers is a pointer to the Rogue River fruit men, for this valley has a reputation for fine fruit equal to that of the famous Northern Oregon valley. The growers of this valley have not a single variety of apples for their boxes, and it is a common occurrence for outside dealers to buy up Rogue River fruit and ship it under their own name and to add to their shipment some of the fruit from other sections which they palm off as Rogue River fruit. Unless the Rogue River growers are as vigilant as are the Hood River growers in guarding the name and reputation of their fruit, the fine reputation that Rogue River fruit has by its superior quality has made in the markets of the world will be a thing of the past, and they will get no better prices than received for fruit grown in the common sections of the country.—Jacksonville Sentinel.

UNIFORM

When you buy Dalles Patent or White River flour you are assured of uniformity—the same this week, next week or next month as that you purchased a week, month or year ago—unless possibly, it's changed only to better its quality, for we're always on the alert to improve our product. Anyway the above brands are always in the lead of good flours.
