J. M. Halliwell has the thanks of the Glacier proprietor for a bunch of the nicest, crisp celery he has ever seen. The stalks were about two feet long and snow white to the leaves. There were four plants in the bunch and it must have weighed eight or ten pounds.

A picnic is what the Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors are going to have Thursday, when they go down to Hood River to present to the fruit fair. They'll board the Dalles City at 7:30 and may return that night or stay two days, as their tickets admit of that.

Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Peak of Salt Lake City were guests of Mrs. Louise Goodland last week. They were much pleased with this fruit valley and quite impressed with the fact of being able to pick ripe blackberries in October and to see three-year-old trees hanging full of apples.

Elwin A. Henderson has accepted a position as special agent of the Equitable Life Insurance company. In company with W. H. Cramer, inspector of the agencies of this company, Mr. Henderson has been doing the valley during the week. Mr. Cramer is well pleased with the prospects in Hood River.

E. L. Smith sent fruit to St. Louis last week from the following orchards: J. L. Carter, 5 boxes apples and 2 boxes of pears; August Paasch, 2 boxes apples. Secretary Gilmer of the Lewis and Clark corporation will be here the latter part of this week to purchase 50 boxes of apples from the Hood River fair to send to St. Louis.

C. H. Oren, representing Bell & Co., commission men at Portland, after thoroughly investigating Mr. Lewis' "Little Old Giant" Apple Press, which is a new invention, bought one at once, saying that it is the most perfect machine he has yet seen. That is saying considerable, as he has been looking at all the presses in the country, endeavoring to get the best.

E. L. Smith, president of the state Board of horticulture, has been asked to deliver lectures before the Fruitgrowers' institutes of the Washington Agricultural College in arranging to give for the farmers of the Yakima and Wenatchee Valleys, but owing to the fruit fair, he is preparing his annual report which must go to press next month, Mr. Smith had to decline the offer.

Sheriff Sexton, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Fred Wilson and Deputy Sheriff W. S. Garrison are attending settlement Sunday, where, with the assistance of several of the settlers there, they made search for further evidence regarding the Norman William murders. Deputy Olinger says very little additional was secured. No trace can be found of the missing bodies, for which such a vigilant search has been made.

One of the pleasant social events of the past week was an "At Home" to a company of ladies given last Saturday by Mrs. W. S. Garrison at her residence on Washington street in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Miner, who has spent the greater part of the summer in eastern Iowa with relatives and friends, and will soon return to her home at Hood River, Oregon.

RUSHING WORK ON FLOUR MILL

A visit to the manufacturing district in the north end of the city shows everything all hustle and bustle there. Twenty-five men with teams are busy getting for the new O. R. & N. freight depot at the foot of Irving street, and a block further west, half this number of men are rushing the work on the Hood River flouring mill.

The warehouse for the mill is already under roof, and the first story and basement of the mill completed. Two more stories of 14 feet each are to be added to the mill, making it from the north side a four-story structure. The work is of a substantial order, everything being done under the direct supervision of J. P. Applin, the manager of the mill.

G. J. Geesling, secretary for the milling company, informs the Glacier that his company is constructing the mill that the capacity may be increased to 200 or 250 barrels a day with the addition of extra rollers. They expect to begin with a 100-barrel capacity.

John P. Applin, who is to be manager of the Hood River Milling Co., is highly spoken of all over the state regarding his capabilities as a first-class and thorough mill man. T. B. Wilcox of the Portland Flouring Mills Co., says Mr. Applin knows more about operating flouring mills than any other man in the state. He is frequently called upon to repair mills when other men find it an impossibility.

The railroad company has lumber on the ground for their warehouse. They or four narrow gauge railways, upon which dump carts are operated with horses, carry the excavated earth and rock to the north of the railroad track, where it is used to make a fill for the extension of the main track toward the river.

The building for the Hood River Milling Co. will cost between $4,000 and $5,000. The milling machinery is said to be worth $20,000.

TO URGE THEM TO SPEND DAY HERE

A. L. Craig, general passenger agent of the O. R. & N., wired Truman Butler Tuesday morning that he would be pleased to have him and Mr. Smith go to Portland Wednesday afternoon to accompany the Portland wholesale men as far as Hood River on the evening train, and urge them to stop at Hood River and view the fruit display.

Both gentlemen will leave this afternoon on No. 1, carrying invitations for each of the 200 Portland business men to spend Friday in Hood River, see the apple show and take a drive through the valley at the invitation of the Hood River Commercial club.

The Fossil Journal comes thus eloquent: Throbbing and pulsating with suppressed energy and force, like a mighty engine ready to leave the depot, eastern Oregon stands today on the threshold of a wonderful development, only waiting for the hand on the throttle. The whole atmosphere is charged with an intense feeling of latent strength about to be utilized—with a tingling, throbbing, burning fever of progress, which, when it gains full sway, will surprise the world. Improved means of transportation is the key that is about to unlock our treasure store.
