

Hood River Glacier

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1904.

The Portland people who came and saw our fruit exposition were convinced that it would be the right thing to send the entire exhibit of box fruit to the world's fair at St. Louis. And they were not long in making the decision that it must go. Now that the Lewis and Clark fair association and the Portland business men have taken the work in hand of shipping the fruit and placing it on display at St. Louis, all know it will be done right. And what a great send off it will prove to be for the state of Oregon and Hood River in particular. There will be nothing like it to be seen at the fair, and Hood River, Oregon, will be advertised to the uttermost ends of the earth. Thousands will be attracted by this exhibit to visit the Lewis and Clark exposition in 1905, and of course many of them will come to see Hood River, the place where the apples were grown. There will be no end to the happy results that will spring from the sending of this exhibit to the world's fair. It gives Hood River another big feather in her cap. Real estate will be held at stiffer prices than ever. The brick blocks now in course of construction in our city will be followed by others in the near future; and their owners can go ahead in the fullest confidence that prosperity at Hood River has come to stay. Planting of orchards will continue until all our available apple land will be one vast orchard. The Mosier section, the White Salmon country and all the territory tributary to Hood River will feel the benefits to be derived from the exhibit of our fruit at the world's fair. And the apple growers who made this grand exhibit possible, the business men of Hood River who pledged their credit, and all who contributed to the success of the Sixth Biennial Horticultural Fair, have earned the lasting gratitude of the people of Oregon and of Hood River especially.

The many complimentary remarks regarding the success of the fruit fair in every particular should be gratifying to the officers of the fair association and the many citizens who have given their services and aid in making the fair the best in the history of the valley. The entertainments have been first class, and too much praise cannot be given to the women members of the committee who had the arranging of the programme for the various evenings.

"The Oregon exhibit is not worthy of Oregon" is frequently the verdict of visitors returning from the world's fair at St. Louis. Wait until a carload of apples reaches there from the Hood River fruit fair. The state's reputation will yet be saved.

Hood River will be on hand at the Lewis and Clark Centennial with an exhibit that will make you glad you live in Oregon.

And let us not forget that the weather clerk was good to Hood River just at the right time.

Come back again, kind friends, in 1906.

George T. Prather and Charles T. Early, members of the sewer committee of the city council have stated to the Glacier that they are determined to go ahead with the proposed sewer system on the original plans. They also state that they have the assurance of all the other members of the council that they would have pledged their support to the measure. The Glacier commends the gentlemen for their firm stand and promises its support and approval in the effort to secure sewers for the city of Hood River. While there are many who will heap abuse upon the members of the council for exercising the power delegated to them by the city council, we believe that in two or three years from now, when the sewer system is completed, the very people who now oppose the movement will be generous enough, when they are reaping the benefits, to accord just and proper praise to these councilmen for their wise and good work. The Glacier is supporting the move for sewers because it is aware that the health of the town demands it. The filthy condition of the premises about many of the private residences in this city is something appalling. The report of the health committee of the council, after making an investigation of the sink drains and water closets about the city, brought to light some frightful disclosures. The stench emitted from these disease-breeding holes is something vile. These statements are inadequate, but the indignant truth compels their utterance. The city council has worked out what we believe to be the most feasible plan of payment, and while it may work a temporary hardship on some of the citizens,

Hood River certainly will not go before the world as a place where the inhospitable prefer to live in filth rather than spend a little money to insure them a healthful and beautiful place of abode. The statement of the law, which gives the city council authority in this matter, is made clear by the letter from Attorney W. H. Wilson, as published elsewhere in this week's Glacier.

HAS POWER TO BUILD SEWER

That Hood River will have a sewer system seems now assured, the numerous remonstrances to the contrary notwithstanding. The members of the sewer committee of the city council have secured legal advice from their attorney, W. H. Wilson of The Dalles, who assures the committee that they have the absolute power to build a sewer system, when the health of the city demands, whether the property owners benefited favor the system or not.

The following letter from Attorney Wilson explains the situation: In talking with Mr. Early, of your committee, yesterday he asked me whether or not the Common Council of the City of Hood River has the power to construct a sewer in a remonstrance against its construction should be signed by all the owners of property that will be directly benefited by the sewer. The question asked by Mr. Early, as I understand it, is, if all the owners of property which would be directly benefited by a sewer or sewer system should oppose its construction, would the council still have the power to construct the sewer over the opposition of all the owners of the property, and also the owners of the sewer system property directly benefited therefrom? I have looked this matter up and will say that the Council has full and complete authority in the matter, and even if the construction of the sewer should be opposed by all property owners, the Council by a two-thirds vote may proceed to construct a sewer and assess its costs upon the property directly benefited.

In the case of Strowbridge vs. the City of Portland, Or., 67, the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon said: "The elaborate manner pointed out in the charter for acquiring the authority to construct the street improvements does not apply to the construction of sewers. The latter may be laid when, in the judgment of the city council, the same shall be necessary. They may be made without previous notice, the Council alone being the judge of their necessity. Sewers are required as a part of the sanitary regulations of a city, and it would not be wise to leave so important a power, often requiring the most prompt exercise, to the tardy mode provided for inaugurating street improvements."

This was afterward cited in the case of Poulson vs. the City of Portland, 16 Ore. 456.

This decision was afterward modified in the case of Wilson vs. the City of Salem, 24 Ore. 364, so far as that case holds that sewers may be constructed and the costs taxed upon the property directly benefited without notice. The last named case holding that notice must be given to the owners of the property, and they must be given an opportunity to be heard concerning the amount and portion of the cost which should be assessed upon their property. So far as the case relates to the power of the Council to construct sewers without obtaining the consent of the property owners, the case of Wilson vs. Portland is still law. Section 55 of the charter of Hood River refers to remonstrances. That Section refers to street improvements, but by Section 95 of the charter it is also made to apply to sewerage. But you will observe that the remonstrance is filed, it is still within the power of the Council by a two-thirds vote to proceed the same as if no remonstrance had been filed.

The power of the Council is absolute, and it has the right to exercise that power and construct sewers when it deems them necessary, whether the work is opposed by all the property owners or not.

URNS DOWN WATER OFFER

The council Monday night turned down good and hard the offer from the Hood River Electric Light, Water and Power Co. to furnish water for fire protection for the period of ten years.

Manager Vorse was present. Securing permission to address the council, he wanted to know in what particulars the proposed ordinance offered by him was unsatisfactory to the council. Councilman Rand replied that the city did not want to pay for the hydrants, costing about $30 each. He wanted to know if the company had a sufficient supply of water for present and future purposes, and why the company had not offered to put up a bond to complete the work within the specified time should the council grant the contract asked for.

To these questions Mr. Vorse replied that his company would agree to put in the hydrants provided the council would give them a 15-year contract. If they find they have not sufficient water from the present supply, the company expect to pump water from Hood river. The matter of offering bonds was a mere oversight which he was willing to rectify.

Mayor Bowers wanted assurance that the citizens on the hill would be given fire protection. He did not regard it just that the citizens on the hill should pay for something that would be of no direct benefit to them. Vorse said he would put hydrants on the hill if the council considered the 50-foot head there sufficient pressure. Councilman Prather said there was no need of 25 hydrants in the city of Hood River. Taxes are heavy enough now, he declared. In his opinion, the proper method for securing fire protection would be to have the city charter amended and a bond issue voted to put in a fire system for the benefit of the whole city. Mr. Vorse replied that his company would not put the number of hydrants if the council so desired. To the remark that a stand pipe should be placed on the hill, the Light Co.'s manager declared such to be out of the question. The Water company does not propose to do anything for nothing. Early declared he would vote to give the Water company a contract when they offered a reasonable price and included the residence on the hill in the proposed fire protection system district.

APPRECIATE THEIR HEARTY WELCOME

Following is the report of the resolutions committee of the Oregon Press association at the meeting in Hood River last week:

Resolved, That the members of the Oregon Press association, individually and collectively, urge upon the proper authorities the speedy construction of the state portage railway between Celilo and The Dalles, to the infinite good of the state at large; and after the construction and equipment of the same that all proper efforts by our association and the state commission in charge of this work, be made to induce the federal government to consummate the plans for a boat canal at Celilo as projected by United States Engineer Captain Hart.

Resolved, That this association will welcome the survey and the locks at Willamette falls, Oregon. City, shall be acquired by the federal government and trust that the proper authorities speedily take action with the end in view of a free and open river to the head waters of the Willamette and its tributaries.

Resolved, That the association is, and has from its inception, been in sympathy and hearty cooperation with the Lewis and Clarke exposition, that the publicity given it without thought of remuneration, and the state commission has done all in its power with the funds at its disposal, to advertise Oregon by its display at St. Louis exposition; that our thanks be tendered the Lewis and Clarke fair board for the invitation to visit the exposition grounds during this session.

Resolved, That the by-laws of the Oregon State Press association be amended so that all who may be admitted to the association as representatives of the paper, and that the paper and not the individual be officially recognized by this association; and, further, that in the event of such members selling or so transferring their business as to bring about their retirement from active newspaper work the individual be disqualified as such.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to inquire into the prevailing rates for foreign advertising current in other state associations; also among our own members, with a view of agreeing upon a uniform rate for this state.

Resolved, That from and after this date it be the duty of our committee that all contracts with railroad or other transportation companies on the part of newspaper publishers, members of this association, shall be strictly lived up to, and that the disposal by a publisher of his contract shall subject such publisher to suspension by this association.

Resolved, That the thanks of this association be hereby tendered to the R. & N. Co. and Southern Pacific Co. the managers of the Columbia River and Northern Railway Co., and The Dalles Transportation Co. for favors received.

And now, in closing this report, what shall we say about the courtesy, kindness, cordiality and generous hospitality of the citizens of Hood River? Occasions frequently occur in this language but feebly expresses one's true feelings; and this is one of our cities. We can say, individually and collectively, that every desire has been anticipated and every want supplied; and as your surroundings are sublime and your productions superlatively fine, by so much we wish that you shall continue to enjoy for many years to come the reputation you so richly deserve.

And, further in this connection, we commend the energy and enterprise displayed by the people of Hood River in developing the splendid resources of their locality. And if Oregon ever attains its rightful position it must be done along these lines.

C. L. BELLAS,

GIVE MONEY FOR TROUT LAKE ROAD

Montreal J. H. Heston was in Hood River Wednesday, soliciting subscriptions from the business men of the city to assist in defraying the expenses of the new road in course of construction between Trout Lake and Underwood landing.

This road will cost about $1500, and the citizens of Klickitat and Skamania exhausted their funds in the construction of the bridge at the mouth of White Salmon, at a cost of $1800, the citizens of Western Klickitat county are compelled to build the road by popular subscription. The farmers of Trout Lake and Camas Prairie have pledged $1200 and ask Hood River to assist with the balance of $300.

This road furnishes a direct route for the Trout Lake and Camas Prairie country to the Columbia river, making the distance shorter by nine miles in a round trip than by the old road to the White Salmon dock. A high grade of 1000 feet is also eliminated.

Mr. Jones features of the Glacier that Amos Underwood has a deal on hand for selling his ferry to some one with capital who proposes to establish a steam ferry between Underwood landing and Hood River. This will give the people of the north side of the Columbia river a much quicker route to the railroad, and will be the means of Hood River securing the large amount of trade from that country that now goes to Portland.

Mr. Jones estimates that there are 2000 people in the Upper White Salmon valley.

In favor of Frankton.
An interesting game of ball between the Hood River second team and the Frankton school team resulted in the score of 9 to 11 in favor of the Frankton boys. This is their first game, and they boys did fine.

Mr. Jones features of the game were two double plays by the Frankton boys and one by Hood River. Charley Hart and Mr. Easterly were batteries for the Frankton team. The same teams will play next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

At the residence of Mrs. Hansberry, Wednesday, October 19, 1904, the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. William Wilder, female services, (this Thursday) morning from the residence of Mrs. Hansberry at 10:30 o'clock.
