

Hood River Glacier

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1904.

The Bickleton News boasts that during the recent campaign it gave no political news save that of its own party. Such 24th journalism was thought to be dead long ago.

To keep up with the rapid strides of his town, Editor Pattison of the Condon Globe has enlarged and improved his paper. He promises now to pull harder than ever for Condon and Gilliam county. The Globe is a good paper in a good town.

The annual report of J. L. Bristow, fourth-assistant postmaster general, recently made public, deals at length with the rural mail service. This part of the report is of particular interest to Hood River people, and is published in another column.

We got our first glimpse this week of Timothy Brownbill's new paper, the Pioneer, at Madras, Crook county. From the extensive advertising patronage extended the Pioneer, northern Crook is coming to be a well settled community.

"Tollers of the Columbia" slipped a cog this week, but if the readers of Paul DeLaney's interesting story will pardon the omission this once, we promise hereafter to give them the remainder of the story, beginning at the break in Chapter XVII.

Some of the transcontinental railroads are figuring on the use of electricity to move heavy freight trains over the Rocky and Cascade mountains. They consider this power will be cheaper than the use of coal for steam engines. The use of electricity advances space very frequently.

The Journal man thinks one thing that Oregon badly needs is more laying hens. It is possibly not so much the need of more hens, foodstuff costs too much for them in this country, as it is for some one to invent a hen-food that will make them lay during the winter months when eggs are 25 cents a dozen.

The re-election of Mayor Blowers, Councilmen Bailey and Mayes and Recorder Nickelson, goes to show the people are satisfied with the present city administration. The men were re-elected by handsome majorities. The new and old members are known to favor the building of a sewer system and other municipal improvements, and the Glacier hopes from now on the council will buckle down to work and give the city a sewer system. There has been enough talk on the matter, but results are what the people demand.

From the 16th annual report of the Oregon Agricultural college, it is noted that according to population, Oregon has as large an attendance in the agricultural department of the state college as any other state excepting Kansas, Minnesota and Mississippi. Farming is more and more coming to be recognized as a science, and with the young men of Oregon doing good work at the agricultural college, their practical results will soon be felt throughout the state. It is the farming communities from whence come a country's solid citizens.

The East Oregonian has the following timely suggestion:
Lying in the heart of the business districts of every city and town in Oregon are hundreds of vacant lots owned by men and corporations who will neither sell nor improve their property. These vacant lots are constantly increasing in value because of the enterprise of men owning adjacent property. The vacant lot escapes its share of taxation because it is vacant, while the owner of land next to it is taxed on his improvements. The owner of the vacant lot should build up the town. The owner of the vacant lot gets rich by the enterprise of others, pays but a pittance in taxes to support the government, and holds back the settlement of the community.

The East Oregonian believes that Oregon assessors should start a concerted movement to tax these owners of idle lots until they will build or sell and allow the vacant land to be used for the upbuilding of the city. Idle city lots are like parasites, under the present system of taxation. They earn nothing by active use, they pay but a pittance of taxes and yet grow fat in value from the reflected wealth, absorbed from activity, thrift and enterprise of others.

The county game warden got after C. R. Bone last week, charging him with turning sawdust into a fish stream. Things were misrepresented to the prosecuting attorney, but in order to avoid a lawsuit, Mr. Bone paid a small fine and was excused. The sawdust in question is carried from the sawmill by the same water that furnishes the power. The stream is one the sawmill makes itself, and continues on into a draw that is merely a winter stream. This winter stream sinks into the ground in several places before it joins Odell creek four miles away, which would make it impossible for the sawdust to reach a fish stream, save during an extremely high freshet, and then not enough to endanger the lives of the fish. No one man has done more to make the East Side farms profitable; to make hundreds of fields of green clover, where nothing but pine trees and chest grass grew before, and it must be annoying to have people make complaint on very slight grounds. We hope Mr. Bone will not be bothered again.

Change in Grocery Firm.
A change has been made in the personnel of the spot cash grocery. Wood Bros. were the former proprietors, but L. W. Wood has retired from the firm, and will travel in the interest of the Ball Bearing Hub Co. His brother, J. B. Wood, remains in the company, and is now associated with the Smith Bros., the firm now being known as Wood & Smith Bros. J. M. Smith has been clerking in the Spot Cash grocery since coming here over a year ago, and his brother, H. C. Smith, was formerly in the employ of the Davidson Fruit Co.

FARMERS DONATE MUCH GOOD FRUIT

Hood River, Dec. 6.—Editor Glacier: Without last week's Glacier came to hand I turned as usual to the editorial page for intellectual pabulum, but when I read in your leader that the farmers of the valley "contributed nothing toward making Hood River known to the outside world" I was filled with amazement. I exclaimed "Can this be? Is it possible that I hold in my hands the Hood River Glacier? Surely this must be The Dalles Chronicle." But the caption "Hood River Glacier" stared me boldly in the face.

While struggling with my thoughts the old story that is told of Lokman, surnamed the wise, came vividly before me. It will be remembered that Lokman lived in the days of Solomon, or thereabouts. One of his slaves, who was a kind man, gave him a kind of melon called the colopuntida, which is one of the bitterest things in the world. Lokman immediately ate it all up, and when making faces or showing the least dislike, I exclaimed "Can this be? Is it possible that I hold in my hands the Hood River Glacier? Surely this must be The Dalles Chronicle." But the caption "Hood River Glacier" stared me boldly in the face.

While struggling with my thoughts the old story that is told of Lokman, surnamed the wise, came vividly before me. It will be remembered that Lokman lived in the days of Solomon, or thereabouts. One of his slaves, who was a kind man, gave him a kind of melon called the colopuntida, which is one of the bitterest things in the world. Lokman immediately ate it all up, and when making faces or showing the least dislike, I exclaimed "Can this be? Is it possible that I hold in my hands the Hood River Glacier? Surely this must be The Dalles Chronicle." But the caption "Hood River Glacier" stared me boldly in the face.

His master quite surprised said: "How was it possible for you to swallow so nauseous a fruit?" Lokman replied, "I have received so many sweets from you that it is not wonderful that I should swallow a bitter fruit from you ever gave me." As reward for this generous and grateful answer, the slave was immediately given his liberty.

So that by reasoning that human nature is much the same in all ages, saw no cause to be offended at your editorial. The good things that our beloved home paper has said of our farmers in the past and the confidence we have that more good things will follow, makes your terrible arraignment, whether in earnest or otherwise seem almost like a benediction.

If it were not that I fear this criticism of us in your slyly read paper might cause the people of many lands to look upon Hood River farmers as a contemptible lot of slylocks, I would not have taken up my pen in defense. The truth of the matter is Hood River farmers are the most public spirited, whole souled fellows on earth, but they are modest and are given to not telling their left hand what their right hand doeth.

It is true that some money has been paid to growers this fall for fancy apples in box lots for exhibition purposes, but demands of this sort are becoming so frequent these days that many growers who are not exhibitors are young could soon find recipients with whom to trade. The vote for the various candidates was:

The town people bore a generous part in the work of getting up the late fruit fair, but it must be remembered that much time and labor was also expended by every exhibitor. To select, pack and deliver for exhibition 10 to 20 boxes of fancy apples is a bigger task than most persons suppose. Few growers are capable of putting up fruit in competitive style and the services of an expert packer must usually be obtained. After all this trouble and expense, which easily amounts to 50 cents a box, it would not have been reasonable to ask each and every grower to give away $10 to $15 worth of fruit.

It can easily be seen that our biennial sales are only made possible by the co-operation and strenuous efforts of Hood River's enterprising horticulturists, and besides this thousands of plates of our choicest apples have been given by them for exhibition in Portland and elsewhere for more than a decade. The real estate man comes to us often for choice samples to send to clients all over the land, and who ever heard of him or his need begging apples for this purpose and going away empty handed.

As before intimated, much is being done by every grower which does not attract much attention at home. Facts and figures on this are not easily obtainable, but I heard not long ago of five boxes of choice Hood River apples going from a grower, free and prepaid, to Yale college. In like manner another box found its way to Bryn Mawr, where the bushes on the apples are said to have outyielded the bushes of the fair students who made away with them.

The entire St. Louis police force at Hood River apples which the grower sent them without cost. Twenty-five crates of strawberries were sent abroad on the same boat on one plantain. Ten boxes of cherries from another producer went free to the Oregon exhibit at St. Louis. The letter carriers, some 70 in all and their families, of Portland, all recently ate apples without cost to any one but the orchardist.

The Grangers who visited Portland a fortnight ago were all fed on apples doated direct from the growers. I also have positive knowledge of single boxes of apples that have been sent east, west, north and south to friends of the growers. One grower has sent from one to four boxes of fruit every year of the six years he has lived in the valley to friends in Iowa and Nebraska, and every visitor that comes to Hood River valley goes away, if he goes at all, with a grip on one corner of his trunk well packed with these apples of Eden.

While the combined farmers of Rogue River are to be commended for giving away 30 boxes of apples, don't for pity's sake compare this isolated case with the efforts which the Hood River farmers have made along this line for years past. If the farmers of Hood River valley had not been equally as generous and forethoughtful as the business men of the town, the fame of our fruits would not have extended far beyond the mountains that surround us.

'Twas a Merry Dancing Party.
One of the most enjoyable social events of the season was the dancing party given at the opera house last Friday evening by the ladies of the Rathbone Sisters, assisted by the Knights of Pythias.

The committees from these societies spared no efforts to make the party one long to be remembered by the pleasure-loving people of Hood River, and the universal compliments so heartily expressed by those present, prove how well they succeeded. The hall was appropriately decorated with national and lodge colors, and festoons of that most beautiful autumn plant, Oregon grape, ornamented the walls, while the stage was banked with palms and ferns and the choicest of autumn flowers.

A large company of invited guests had gathered and promptly at 9 o'clock the ball was opened with the grand march led by Major Booth. It was a thoroughly enjoyed affair. Lunch was served at 11:30, and the merry dancers were soon again upon the floor. Professor McCalley and his pianist, Miss Braze, responded promptly with such excellent music that almost every number was heartily enjoyed.

FIRST TICKET IS SUCCESSFUL

The city election Tuesday resulted in a clean sweep for the Citizens' and Taxpayers' ticket, with the one exception of recorder, J. R. Nickelson, the present incumbent, being re-elected over the regular nominee. There was some opposition developed during the day, and carriages were kept busy hustling voters to the polls.

The total vote was 280, an increase of 11 over one year ago. The result is a virtual endorsement of the present administration, and went to show that Mr. Kelly, whose hands were chosen for mayor and councilmen at the Monday night mass meeting in the opera house.

The vote for the various candidates was:

MAYOR	A. S. Blowers.....170	M. F. Lhaw.....104

TREASURER	W. G. Eliot.....123	J. R. Nickelson.....147

While there was only one nominee for treasurer, the Citizens' nominee, Truman Butler having refused to accept, 39 voters wrote his name on the ballot, several other people received a scattering vote.
