HOPE TO AGREE OUTSIDE COURT

MILL MEN WANT NO FIGHT

Have Offered to Make Settlement With Trout Lake Farmers—Should Be Water for All.

Because of the restraining order issued against the Menominee Lumber company at the instance of the Trout Lake farmers, the lumber company is prevented from driving logs down the Whit Salmon river, and as a consequence the four logging camps have been closed and over 150 men thrown out of employment.

"I believe this matter was first brought to our attention last year," says J. E. Cameron, president of the Menominee Lumber company, "I went immediately to Trout Lake to confer with the parties who claimed they were injured. After so doing and going all over the district we agreed (meaning the several ditch companies) to hold a mass meeting and see if we couldn't arrive at some amicable agreement. We went then to come up and meet them again the following week. My brother, Mr. Frost and myself were there at the time agreed upon and when the meeting was called we were about the only ones there. I remember that there were three of the ditch owners there and of course we could do nothing, but at that time we made a statement that would not them half way to arrive at a solution of the matter in question. I believe that the Menominee Lumber company was then brought to the attention of the parties who had brought the action against us, but we are pleased to state that no action has been brought by any one of the three that were there that night, and that one of the parties who has brought the action does not take water from the Whit Salmon, but from Trout creek, consequently he could not be damaged by us at all.

"We will have hopes before the end of the winter if some agreement can be made, whereby we both can use the water, as there is certainly plenty for all. We feel that we have benefited the Trout Lake district to a very great extent and will not work show for itself when the proper time comes.

"As you well know when two parties go to law it costs them considerable and it is to be believed if the money had been used to improve the ditches in and of going to law that we would both be far ahead in the long run, as far as the money part is concerned, and we would still retain the friendship of the parties who we expect to do business with in the years to come."

The farmers on the other hand believe they have a grievance that is well founded. The jamming of the logs in the river caused the waters of the river to overflow and do serious damage when the river was being flooded, and on the other hand the farmers stored preparatory to a winter crop of the farm-ers, which is a great crop in the region of Trout Lake, was seriously injured by reason of scarcity of water for irrigation.

The farmers claim that the injunction suit was instituted to injure them in the enjoyment of their land along the stream; that they regard the necessity of litigation, but cannot file the corporation the right to do their lands and diminish their profits as farmers.

DEPENDS ON RIGHT OF WAY

RAILROAD ROUTE NOT SELECTED

East Siders Want Road to Come their Way—Several Surveys Made.

"If we can secure the necessary rights of way we hope to have our railroad in operation by next September," remarked W. H. Eccles, of the Oregon Lumber Co., in conversation with a Glacier reporter.

Mr. Eccles arrived in Hood River last Thursday night. He was accompanied by Mr. West, the Oregon Lumber Co.'s chief engineer. Mr. West expects to remain here several months, and if the railroad up the valley is constructed will superintend the engineering work.

It was given out last week from the head office of the company in Ogden that the board of directors had decided to build the road up the west side of the valley, but it seems that no such final decision has been made.

While the route would mean an easier grade, is four miles shorter and would lessen the cost of construction $75,000 or more, several of the influential citizens of the East Side, among whom are C. R. Boone, W. H. Sears, C. K. Marshall, Bert VanHorn, William Kennedy and others have taken it upon themselves to interest their neighbors in offering the company inducements in the shape of rights of way for building up the East Side of the valley.

The Oregon Lumber Co. owns 20,000 acres of timber along the headwaters of Hood river, and it is primarily for the purpose of bringing this timber to the saw mill in this city that the railroad will be built. Other parties own large timber interests in the upper part of the valley, and the railroad is considered necessary to bring out the sawlogs. Driving the river has not been found at all satisfactory.

"We could not think of building the road merely for the passenger traffic of the valley," said Mr. Eccles. "Neither could any one else. Business will not justify it for years to come. We figure that the road will cost between $250,000 and $300,000. More than likely it will take all the latter sum.

"A number of feasible routes have been proposed. The selection of any one of these will depend a great deal on the cost of securing rights of way.

"No, no," replied Mr. Eccles, "we couldn't do anything like that. The farmers would continue to haul their fruit and cordwood as they do now. I am certain it will be cheaper by half for the farmers to ship their fruit and hay by the railroad than it costs them now to haul it with teams."

Engineer West firmly believes the railroad will be the making of the upper part of the valley. "It will give them an easy means of transportation," said he, "and will open up a part of the valley to settlement where land is cheap now because it is too far to haul fruit and other produce to market.

"A railroad will add many dollars to the value of the fruit farms of the valley."
