"When the question of fine came np." says District Attorney Menefee, "I insisted that the fine should be a heavy one, unless with the understanding that the saloons should close np." says District Attorney Menefee, "I insisted that the fine should be a heavy one, unless with the understanding that the saloons should close up and remain closed until the case was decided by the supreme court, when if it should be decided in favor of the defendants, of course we would have nothing against them. Judge Bradshaw agreed with my advice and stood by me in the transaction and the fines were placed at $50 upon the promises of two defendants in open court to me that their places of business should be closed until the case was decided by the supreme court. The same action was taken with the other defendants, the two Foutses, upon the assurance of their attorney to the same effect. In other words, we have the promises of these people that they will not again violate the law and will do nothing in the way of selling liquor unless the supreme court holds they have a right to.

"We thought this arrangement the seet policy because our object was to seet that the law was not violated and been delayed by a wash-out and the other defendants."

This last sentence is what retoricans would call "periodic." It begins away back in the past and comes ambling up to the present in a listless and supine manner as if the future labeled by a wash-out and the other defendants.

"We thought this arrangement the ambling up to the present in a listless best policy because our object was to see that the law was not violated and the sale of liquor if it was a violation the present were in a state of coma. I knows I got it,"—Lippincott's. the sale of liquor if it was a violation of law and also to prevent the necesof law and also to prevent the necessity of further prosecutions and the expense incidental thereto, and I presume, that is all any people of Hood River could ask. The fines were placed at $50 for the reason above stated, and further, when assured that the law would not be violated, it seemed to the court that the violation so far was, to a certain extent at least, in good faith and upon the advice of their attorneys that the law was not good. The Menominee Lumber company is the largest employer in western Klickitat. Its employes are many of them single men but in many cases families are dependent on the earnings of the sturdy men who do its work. The closing down of its camps is a public misfortune, there's no doubt of that. Whether the just claims of the Trout Lake farmers made the injunction suit necessary is a question I do not care to guess at. In many churches of Provence and Italy, especially those near the sea, paintings placed on the walls in accordance with vows made by pligrims in moments of danger are often remarkable for their frames. Among the curiosities may be enumerated laths formed of splinters from ships that have been wrecked; also frames made of pieces of heavy cables, occasionally painted bright hues, but sometimes left in their primitive gray color splashed with tar. Natled to the laths surrounding a painting representing sailors fighting with fierce savages may be seen African or Polynesian spears and darts or swords made of hard wood, evidently mementos of terrible struggles. Sallors or landsmen who have made vows during times of peril at sea and who have no trophies to display will surround their paintings with broad bands of wood heavily incrusted with shells and seaweed, not infrequently of rare and extremely beautiful kinds.

The shutting down of the company's Thursday of last week word came from The Dailes that the saloca keepers had been fined for violating the local option law, and the doors in this city immediately closed. Snow began falling at once and in a few hours the city was experiencing zero weather.

During the previous week. District Attorney Menefee informed against C. E. Hayward, John Morrison, P. F. Fouts and Seneca Fouts, the proprietors of the four Hood River saloons, charging them with violating the prohibition law by selling liquor within

The shutting down of the company's industries is looked upon generally as a public misfortune, as many employees are thrown out of work. On the other hand the farmers are increased at the destruction of their irrigation ditches and farming lands by the mill company. It is reported between good authority that the lands of a colored man were badly injured and his claim for redress ignored.
