

The Simple Life

By CHARLES WAGNER

Translated from the French by Mary Louise Hendes

Copyright, 1901, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

Here we are talking of right family feeling, and nothing else in the world can take its place, for in it lie in germ all those fine and simple virtues which assure the strength and duration of social institutions. And the very base of family feeling is respect for the past, for the best possessions of a family are its common memories. An intangible, indivisible and inalienable capital, these souvenirs constitute a sacred fund that each member of a family ought to consider more precious than anything else he possesses. They exist in a dual form, in idea and in fact. They show themselves in language, habits of thought, sentiments, even instincts, and one sees them materialized in portraits, furniture, buildings, dress, songs. To profane eyes they are nothing to the eyes of those who know how to appreciate the things of the family they are relics with which one should not part at any price.

But what generally happens in our day? Worldliness wars upon the sentiment of family, and I know of no strife more impassioned. By great means and small, by all sorts of new customs, requirements and pretensions, the spirit of the world breaks into the domestic sanctuary. What are the stranger's rights, its titles? Upon what does it rest its presumptuous claims? This is what people too often neglect to inquire. They make a mistake. We treat the invader as very poor and simple people do a pompous visitor. For this incommensurate guest of a day they pillage their garden, bully their children and servants and neglect their work. Such conduct is not only wrong; it is impolitic. One should have the courage to remain what he is in the face of all comers.

The worldly spirit is full of impertinences. Here is a home which has formed characters of mark and is forming them yet. The people, the furnishings, the customs are all in harmony. By marriage or through relations of business or pleasure the worldly spirit enters. It finds everything out of date, awkward, too simple, lacking the modern touch. At first it restricts itself to criticism and light raillery. But this is the dangerous moment. Look out for yourself—here is the enemy! If you so much as listen to his reasonings, tomorrow you will sacrifice a piece of furniture, the next day a good old tradition, and so on by one the family heirlooms dear to the heart will go to the bric-a-brac dealer—and filial piety with them.

In the midst of your new habits and in the changed atmosphere your friends of other days, your old relatives, will be expropriated. Your next step will be to lay them aside in their turn. The worldly spirit leaves the old out of consideration. At last, established in an absolutely transformed setting, even you will view yourself with amazement. Nothing will be familiar, but surely it will be correct—at least the world will be satisfied. Ah, that is where you are mistaken! After having made you cast out pure treasure as so much junk it will find that your borrowed livery fits you ill and will hasten to make you sensible of the ridiculousness of the situation. Much better have had from the beginning the courage of your convictions and have defended your home.

Many young people when they marry listen to this voice of the world. Their parents have given them the example of a modest life, but the new generation thinks it affirms its rights to existence and liberty by repudiating ways in its eyes too patriarchal. So these young folks make efforts to set themselves up lavishly in the latest fashion and rid themselves of useless property at dirt cheap prices. Instead of filling their houses with objects which say, "Remember!" they garnish them with quite new furnishings that as yet have no meaning. Wait, I am wrong; these things are often worse, as it were, of a facile and superficial existence. In their midst one breathes a certain leaden vapor of mundanity. They recall the life outside, the turmoil, the rush. And were one sometimes disposed to forget this life they would call back his wandering thought and say, "Remember!" In another sense, do not forget your appointment at the club, the play, the races. The home then becomes a sort of halfway house where one comes to rest a little between two prolonged absences. It isn't a good place to stay. As it has no soul, it does not speak to you. Time to eat and sleep, and then off again! Otherwise you become as dull as a hermit.

We are all acquainted with people who have a rage for being abroad, who think the world would no longer go round if they didn't figure on all sides of it. To stay at home is penal. There they cease to be in view. A horror of home life possesses them to such a degree that they would rather pay to be bored outside than be amused gratuitously within.

In this way society slowly gravitates toward life in herds, which must not be confounded with public life. The life in herds is somewhat like that of swarms of flies in the sun. Nothing so much resembles the worldly life of a man as the worldly life of another man. And this universal banality destroys the very essence of public spirit. One need not journey far to discover the ravages made in modern society by the spirit of worldliness, and if we have so little foundation, so little equilibrium, calm good sense and initiative, one of the chief reasons lies in the undermining of the home life. The masses have timed their pace by that of people of fashion. They, too, have become worldly. Nothing can be more so than to quit one's own hearth for the life of saloons. The squalor and misery of the homes are not enough to explain the current which carries each man away from his own. Why does the peasant desert for the inn the house that his father and grandfather found so comfortable? It has remained the same. There is the same fire in the same chimney. Whence comes it that it lights only an incomplete circle when in olden times young and old sat shoulder to shoulder? Something has changed in the minds of men. Yielding to dangerous impulses, they have broken with simplicity. The fathers have quitted their post of honor, the wives grow dull beside the solitary hearth, and the children quarrel while waiting their turn to go abroad, each after his own fancy.

We must learn again to live the home life, to value our domestic traditions. A pious care has preserved certain monuments of the past. So antique dress, provincial dialects, old folk songs, have found appreciative hands to gather them up before they should disappear from the earth. What a good deed, to guard these crumbs of a great past, these vestiges of the souls of our ancestors! Let us do the same for our family traditions, save and guard as much as possible of the patriarchal, whatever its form.

But not every one has traditions to keep; all the more reason for redoubling the effort to constitute and foster a family life. And to do this there is need neither of numbers nor a rich establishment. To create a home you must have the spirit of home. Just as the smallest village may have its history, its moral stamp, so the smallest home may have its soul. Oh, the spirit of places, the atmosphere which surrounds us in human dwellings! What a world of mystery! Here, even on the threshold, the cold begins to penetrate; you are ill at ease; something intangible repulses you. There no sooner does the door shut you in than friendliness and good humor envelop you. It is said that walls have ears. They have also voices, a mute eloquence. Everything that a dwelling contains is bathed in an ether of personality. And I find proof of its quality even in the apartments of bachelors and solitary women. What an abyss between one room and another room! Here all is dead, indifferent, commonplace; the device of the owner is written all over it, even in his fashion of arranging his photographs and books. All is the same to me. There one breathes in animation, a contagious joy in life. The visitor hears repeated in countless fashions: "Whoever you are, guest of an hour, I wish you well. Peace be with you."

Words can do little justice to the subject of home, tell little about the effect of a favorite flower in the window or the charm of an old armchair where the grandfather used to sit, offering his wrinkled hands to the kisses of chubby children. Poor moderns, always moving or remodeling! We who from transforming our cities, our houses, our customs and creeds have no longer where to lay our heads, let us not add to the pathos and emptiness of our changeable existence by abandoning the life of the home. Let us light again the flame put out on our hearths, make sanctuaries for ourselves, warm nests where the children may grow into men, where love may find privacy, old age repose, prayer an altar and the fatherland a cult.

CHAPTER XI.
SIMPLE BEAUTY.

SOME one may protest against the nature of the simple life in the name of aesthetics or oppose to ours the theory of the service of luxury, that providence of business, fostering mother of arts and grace of civilized society. We shall try briefly to anticipate these objections.

It will no doubt have been evident that the spirit which animates these pages is not utilitarian. It would be an error to suppose that the simplicity we seek has anything in common with that which misers impose upon themselves through cupidity or narrow-minded people through false austerity. To the former the simple life is the one that costs least; to the latter it is a flat and colorless existence, whose merit lies in depriving oneself of everything bright, smiling, seductive.

It displeases us not a whit that people of large means should put their fortune into circulation instead of hoarding it, so giving life to commerce and the fine arts. That is using one's privileges to good advantage. What we would combat is foolish prodigality, the selfish use of wealth and, above all, the quest of the superfluous on the part of those who have the greatest need of taking thought for the necessary. The lavishness of a Maecenas could not have the same effect in a society as that of a common spendthrift who astonishes his contemporaries by the magnificence of his life and the folly of his waste. In these two cases the same term means very different things. To scatter money broadcast does not say it at all. There are ways of doing it which ennoble men and others which degrade them. Besides, to scatter money supposes that one is well provided with it. When the love of sumptuous living takes possession of those whose means are limited the matter becomes strangely altered. And a very striking characteristic of our time is the rage for scattering broadcast which the very people have who have the greatest need of taking thought for the necessary. Let us even allow that the prodigality of certain rich men is a safety valve for the escape of the superabundant. We shall not attempt to gild it. Our contention is that too many people meddle with the safety valve when to practice economy is the part of both their interest and their duty. Their extravagance is a private misfortune and a public danger.

So much for the utility of luxury. We now wish to explain ourselves upon the question of aesthetics—oh, very modestly and without trespassing on the ground of the specialists. Through a too common illusion simplicity and beauty are considered as rivals. But simple is not synonymous with ugly any more than sumptuous, stylish and costly are synonymous with beautiful. Our eyes are wounded by the crying spectacle of gaudy ornament, venal art and senseless and graceless luxury. Wealth coupled with bad taste sometimes makes us regret that so much money is in circulation to provide the creation of such a prodigality of horrors. Our contemporary art suffers as much from the want of simplicity as does our literature—too much in it that is irrelevant, overwrought, falsely imagined. Rarely is it given us to contemplate in line, form or color that simplicity allied to perfection which commands the eyes as evidence does the mind. We need to be rebaptized in the ideal purity of immortal beauty which puts its seal on the masterpiece. One shaft of its radiance is worth more than all our pompous exhibitions.

Yet what we now have most at heart is to speak of the ordinary aesthetics of life, of the care one should bestow upon the adornment of his dwelling and his person, giving to existence that luster without which it lacks charm. For it is not a matter of indifference whether man pays attention to these superfluous necessities or whether he does not; it is by them that we know whether he puts soul into his work. Far from considering it as wasteful to give time and thought to the perfecting, beautifying and poetizing of forms, I think we should spend as much as we can upon them. Nature gives us her example, and the man who should affect contempt for the ephemeral splendor of beauty with which we garnish our brief days would lose sight of the intentions of him who had put the same care and love into the painting of the lily of an hour and the eternal hills.

(To be continued.)

Pleasant and Harmless.
Don't drug the stomach to cure a cough. One Minute Cough Cure soothes the mucous, draws the inflammation out of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, heals, soothes and cures. A quick cure for croup and whooping cough. Sold by G. E. Williams.

Watts Marble Works
The Dalles, Ore.

BERT G. BOARDMAN,
Has opened a
General Store
AT ODELL
and will keep on hand a first-class stock of Groceries, Flour and Feed

The public is invited to call and inspect the stock. A square deal for all.

MILWAUKEE NURSERIES

We have 5000 Yellow Newton Pippin and Spitzenberg Apple Trees, also a general variety of Fruit Trees and shrubs, the coming season, and we are going to sell them at reasonable prices. Our trees are first class and True to Name. Trial on whole roots, with action carefully selected from some of the best bearing orchards in Hood River Valley. Send for prices to

MILWAUKEE NURSERIES
Milwaukee, Oregon
F. E. STRANG, Local Agent. N. B. HARVEY, Proprietor.

Some Bargains.

Our list contains about 49 different tracts of fruit and general farm lands in Mosier; about 500 acres in Underwood, divided into tracts of from 40 to 320 acres each; also about 185 different tracts of farm property in Hood River valley, and some very desirable residences in Hood River and Mosier.

62. 35 acres one-half mile from Mt. Hood P. O. 14 acres in clover, 4 in hay 14 in strawberries, 1 share water, 2 houses, all for $1400.

24. 42 acres 5 miles out, 16 acres in orchard, 10 full bearing. First-class improvements. A beautiful home.

28. 80 acres, 5 acres 7-year-old apple trees, balance in clover and general farming. New 4-room house.

2. 40 acres in the most beautiful portion of the valley. 4 acres in orchard one year old, 31 acres in berries, 4 acres in alfalfa, balance general farming.

W. J. BAKER & CO.
Real Estate Agents
Hood River, Oregon.

MY ENTIRE LINE OF Shoes and Rubber Goods
Men's and Ladies' Underwear

will be closed out at Reduced Prices.

And all the rest of my stock of General Merchandise is being sold very low.

GEO. P. CROWELL.

C. T. RAWSON. F. H. STANTON

HOOD RIVER NURSERY.
Stock Grown on Full Roots.
We desire to let our friends and patrons know that for the fall planting we will have and can supply in any number
Cherry, Pear, Apricot, Peach & Plum Trees, GRAPES, CURRANTS, BERRY PLANTS, Shade and Ornamental Trees.
Also, all the standard varieties of apple trees. Can supply the trade with plenty of Newtown, Spitzenberg and Jonathan apple trees.
RAWSON & STANTON, Hood River, Or.

LESLIE BUTLER
TRUMAN BUTLER

ESTABLISHED 1900.
Residents of Wasco Co. for 23 Years

BUTLER & CO., BANKERS.
Transact a General Banking Business.
Interest Paid on Time Deposits.
Issue American Bankers Association Money Orders payable any place in the United States.

SNOW & UPSON
For All Kinds of
Grubbing Supplies, Wood Choppers and Loggers Tools

A full line of stock always on hand. Does your horse interfere? Bring him in. No cure no pay.

FASHION STABLE
Livery, Feed and Draying.
STRANAHANS & BAGLEY.

Horses bought, sold or exchanged. Pleasure parties can secure first-class rigs. Special attention given to moving Furniture and Pianos. We do everything horses can do.
HOOD RIVER, OREGON.

C. L. GILBERT, Proprietor. C. F. GILBERT, Manager.

Mt. Hood Hotel
HOOD RIVER, OREGON.
Headquarters for Tourists & Commercial Travelers
Regular Rates, $1.25 to $2.50 per day.
Special Rates by Week or Month.
Stages leave daily for Cloud Cap Inn during July, August and September.

J. B. FLETCHER & CO.
DEALERS IN
Groceries, Flour and Feed, Notions, Glassware, Crockery, etc.
HOOD RIVER HEIGHTS.

A COMPLETE STOCK OF
FURNITURE and Building Material
PAINTS AND OILS.

FURNITURE REPAIRED. Best prices guaranteed. Call and look through the Stock. Glad to show you around.

BARTMESS
Undertaker and Embalmer

Williams' Pharmacy
HAS A FULL LINE OF Spraying Material
DRUGS and CHEMICALS
Bring us your Prescriptions.
Brosius Block.

DAVIDSON FRUIT CO
FRUIT DEALERS
and Manufacturers of all kinds of Fruit Boxes
Highest Prices Paid for High Grade Fruit.

J. H. GILL,
—DEALER IN—
Staple and Fancy Groceries AND HARDWARE.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
Majestic & Mesaba Ranges and Stiletto Cutlery.
HOOD RIVER HEIGHTS, OREGON.

HOTEL WAUCOMA
P. F. FOUTS, Prop.
RATES, $2.00 to $2.50 PER DAY.
Steam heat. Large pleasant rooms. Everything new. Sample room for commercial travelers.
HOOD RIVER, OREGON.

CENTRAL MARKET
MAYES BROS., Proprietors.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF Fresh & Cured Meats
VEGETABLES and FRUITS.

The First National Bank OF HOOD RIVER
WE PAY INTEREST ON TIME DEPOSITS
The habit of thrift acquired by the saving of money must prove of greater value than the money itself. You are sure to gain by depositing, and thus saving your money. A bank account tends to give you a substantial standing in the community.
Drafts and Bank Money Orders Sold on All Parts of the World.
THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

HOOD RIVER TRANSFER & LIVERY CO.
TICKET OFFICE FOR THE REGULATOR LINE OF STEAMERS.
Hauling, Draying, Baggage Transferred, First Class Livery Turnouts Always Ready.
Phone 131.