THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1906.

In the hour of the downfall of his political, yes, personal enemy, Editor Scott refrains from any comment other than the following three-line stanza:

The purest treasure mortal time affords
Is spotted reputation; that way,
Men are but gilded loam and painted clay.

The trading stamp incubus still weighs heavily on the shoulders of the merchants of town and city. When the merchants can educate their customers to a realization of the fact that nobody gets something for nothing, half the battle for independence from this evil will be won, says the Oregon Tradesman.

Mount Hood people show the stuff they are made of. They held a rousing meeting last Saturday and organized a Development League. They intend to have a telephone system commensurate with their needs, an extension of the railroad to their valley, and a creamery. Keep your eye on Mount Hood, and watch the upper valley grow.

During the progress of the Mitchell trial it was interesting to note the manner in which the little dailies of the state would permit their strong prejudice to creep into the headlines of the dispatches covering the case in court. Too often the real point in the story was lost sight of in an effort to have the proceedings come the way they would like to have seen them.

Hood River will vote again next week on the proposition of bonding for a municipal water system. Mr. Davidson, at Monday night's council meeting, intimated that his company would consider an offer to sell. The new ordinance enables the city to consider such an offer. No one wants to see a confiscation of private property; therefore as a majority of the people have declared themselves in favor of municipal ownership of the water system of Hood River, let us all get together and work on a business basis for the best interests of the city.

The Fourth in Hood River was a glorious success. The parade and other features of the celebration were a credit to the enterprise and enthusiasm of the city. Half a thousand dollars was given by the business men for the expenses of the day. The business houses will all tell you it was a paying investment, and that their trade last Monday exceeded any previous on day's business in the history of the city. Every one celebrated and all were happy. Those in charge of the preparations of the celebration, Chairman Hartley and all his assistants, are deserving of praise for their successful work.

John H. Mitchell, Oregon's senior senator, has been convicted of receiving moneys for services rendered the land grabbers in work before the federal departments at Washington. He has fought a hard fight, and still clings to the hope that higher courts may free him from the disgrace of paying the penalty of his crime. 'Tis a sad ending, indeed, of an able man who, though he has done much for his friends and the state of Oregon, has borne a reputation not altogether freed from stain. There are many who, after a careful reading of the proceedings of his trial, still believe the aged senator guiltless of any overt attempt at crime. Be that as it may, we cannot see how the jury could have rendered any other verdict on the overwhelming mass of incriminating evidence produced against the defendant by the intrepid Mr. Heney. To us it seems a harsh, yet just verdict.

Hospital for Hood River.
Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Wall, two trained nurses, graduates of Minneapolis City Hospital, have rented the Marcellus cottage on C street, and will conduct a modern hospital.

The house has been renovated and equipped with all modern appliances. There will be accommodations for five or six patients. In connection with this they propose to do hourly, daily and weekly nursing in the homes. These ladies are highly recommended and are sure to meet with the hearty support and good will of the community.

Miss Jessie Criffield of Walla Walla is visiting with Mrs. V. C. Brock of this city.

Rev. W. A. Elkins is home from Turner where he assisted in revival work. He will preach at his church next Sunday, both morning and evening.

A New Yorker was visiting in Boston. Seeing a parrot in a cage, he asked: "Does Polly want a cracker?" "I require no sustenance from any whatever," replied the Back Bay bird, with haughtiness.

FOURTH, GALA DAY IN CITY

The booming of cannon at daybreak announced the arrival of the Fourth in Hood River. The small boy was up and doing shortly after, and not until the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" floated to the morning air of Wednesday, did the patriotic people of Hood River cease their revelry in celebration of the grandest day in the American calendar. July 4, 1895, will long be remembered in Hood River. The parade was the strong feature of the day. The line of march was not long, but the arrangement was such as to allow all the residents, as well as the visitors, an opportunity of witnessing it and enjoying the many novel bits. The movement clearly showed that at the head was a general, everything passing off in a simple, every thing passing off in a simple order. There is a great deal of credit due the committee, merchants, and to the ladies in the arrangement of the floats, many costing not only many dollars, but long hours of labor.

As the parade passed along the line round after round of applause burst from the crowd, as this one and that one was noted. S. E. Bartness' "old mule Maud," that has caused so many smiles in the syndicate Sunday papers, was one of the strong cards and received a glad hand from every one. Major J. S. Booth clearly showed how easy it is for him to arrange something original. Frank A. Cram's float was attractive and came in for its share of attention. Luckey & Mullen were there in all their glory, so were many others.

The public speaking and other exercises of the day were conducted in the opera house. An opening song was rendered by a chorus of young people. Rev. W. C. Gilmora, pastor of the Riverside Congregational church, rendered the invocation. There was more music by the chorals, and Chairman V. C. Brooks introduced Miss Maude Eldon of The Dalles, who in a beautiful and clear voice, recited that grand old document which made tyranny tremble in the days of '76, the Declaration of Independence.

Hon. A. A. Jayne delivered an able and well rendered address. Mr. Jayne referred to the many children before him, remarking that the scene at the parade that day would have made glad the heart of the president, who would be forced to admit there was no tendency toward race suicide in this city. The main theme touched upon by Speaker Jayne was a plea for a true patriotism of honesty and decency, as preached by the head of the nation, Theodore Roosevelt.

Notes of the day.
Among the little girls who rode in the liberty car were:
Alice Taylor, Lela McCrory, Laura Rand, Catherine Hartley, Marguerite Reid, Helen Stewart, Lena Stewart, Florence Brosius, Florence Gould, DeForrest Gould, Frances Castner, Velma Richardson, Madge Hollowell, Beth Edgington, Orva Wright, Vivian Jones, Helen Orr, Ruth Hanna, Pearl Curtis, Mary Haven, Martha Hood, Mildred Huxley, Irma Yates, Ray Luckey, Allie Moody, Ethel McDonald, Ella McDonald, Lulu Prather, Wilma Thompson, Ruth Evans, Jessie Evans, Myrtle Hove, Bessie Wheeler, Lena Reed, Mara Young, Marguerite Bowen, Gladys Mollen, Rosa Johnson, Ollie Mayer, May Shay, Catherine McCoy, May Coulter.

H. M. Abbott was grand marshal of the day. His aides were Herr Wenter and A. J. Flood.

Two accidents occurred during the day. At the conclusion of one of the horse races, Estee Brosius was run into by one of the horses. He was thrown to the ground, and his head and chest badly bruised. It was thought for a time his injuries were very serious, but a good night's rest brought the lad around in fine form. Little Frank Ballard came near losing the sight of one of his eyes by a firecracker exploding near his face. While the wound was painful, it was not so serious as was at first reported.

James DeBorde was in charge of the display of fire works. There was good general variety, and the manner of setting them off could not have been improved upon. Several times and people gathered in front of the Mount Hood hotel to view the pyrotechnic display.

The volunteer fire department made a splendid showing during their performance in the evening. Within six minutes after leaving the engine house, the blazing pile of debris on the Davidson block was completely smothered out, and the hose carefully wound on the reel of the hose car. The boys who participated were:

Chemawa Takes the Game.
Over 1300 people passed through the gates of Columbia park to see the ball game on the afternoon of the Fourth between the local nine and the Redskins from the Chemawa training school. Osburn for the locals played in hard luck, the visitors hitting him all over the field in the first inning, when they scored a lead of three runs which the home nine was unable to overcome.

Winners of the various races:
Foot race, boys under 13—Austin Lockman.
Foot race, girls under 13—Orpha Pilsinger.
Old men's race, over 60 years of age—John Leland Henderson.
Pony race—James Gray.
Foot race, 100 yard dash—Levi Sottor of Chemawa.
Foot race, 50 yard dash, under 18 years—Barnes; Chemawa—Everett Rand, Howard Hartley second.
Horse race, free for all—Horse owned by—Dunn.

Several people on the heights saw the display of red fire on the summit of Mount Hood Tuesday night.

The volunteer fire department made a splendid showing during their performance in the evening. Within six minutes after leaving the engine house, the blazing pile of debris on the Davidson block was completely smothered out, and the hose carefully wound on the reel of the hose car. The boys who participated were:

Tabbits will cure you. Price only 30c.
Rev. H. W. Jones, Baptist state evangelist, will conduct revival meetings in the Bateham store building, next to Gill's, beginning July 9. Mr. Jones is an able and successful preacher of the gospel. All are cordially invited.

Brigadier General Jones, prominent in Woodmen lodge circles, and traveling representative of Tilton Bros., Portland, was in Hood River Thursday.

The fine new home of the Davidson Bros. at Willow Flat is completed. Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Davidson are arranging to close their home in the city for the summer, and move out to Willow Flat.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Haynes and children left the first of the week to visit the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland. Later in the week they will go to their new home at Ripert, Idaho, where Mr. Haynes has taken a homestead in the Minidoka country. Mr. Haynes has disposed of his interest in the barber shop to James DeBorde, who will occupy the Haynes cottage on Sherman avenue. The money Hood River friends of Mr. and Mrs. Haynes wish from abundance of success in their new home.

Five years in the penitentiary is the sentence imposed by Judge Bradshaw upon Frank Summers, convicted of assault upon Nightwatchman Crato, when that officer came near losing his life by a revolver shot in the hands of Summers. Summers was heavily drunk at the time of the shooting. He broke into tears when the sentence was imposed. Crato, it is feared, will never be a strong man again.
