As soon as they arrived the examination was held before Jutice Steut, and the evidence being very clear, St. John was held to the circuit court in the sum of $500, in circuit court in the sum of $500 in default of which he was committed to the county jail.

For about a month St. John has been at the Locks, following no particular vocation, but managing in various ways to get a living. He was one of the base ball nine that played. The Dalles club two weeks ago, and also last Sunday, and when asked by a reporter this morning what he had been doing at the Locks, could only give this as his means of earning a livelihood. He formerly lived in Multnomah county, where his parents now reside, and says his age is 24 years. In appearance the young man is rather prepossessing, and is one of those fellows who could easily travol on his shape and be successful by reason of good looks.
