

BECOMES CHRISTIAN AND IS PAYING DEBTS

Some two or three years ago, an itinerant junk dealer secured 100 pounds of old iron from the Oregon Lumber Co.'s yards at Viento. The peddler left town without paying for his ware. The Oregon Lumber Co. soon forgot the incident, but last week Mr. Early received the following letter from the individual who had secured the scrap iron. Out of consideration for the gentleman, his name is omitted:

"Portland, Or., Aug. 23.—Proprietors of Oregon Lumber Co., Viento, Or.—Sirs: I enclose you fifty cents to pay for some old iron that I bought in Viento about four years ago. I feel that I should do this. I am a Christian and am trying to make right the wrong things that I have done. I think there was about 100 pounds of iron which belonged to your company. Trusting this will be satisfactory to you, Yours respectfully,

The "Protection" Petich.

Portland Oregonian.

There would be no protective tariff if somebody were not to get advantage from it, at expense of others. In the nature of things all cannot profit from subsidies or bonuses, which all must pay. Some will have the advantage. One class or set may pass the burden on to another; but there must be a basis or bottom somewhere. So the burden is passed on from one class to another, till at last it falls on the poorer or more helpless class, who can pass it on no further. So riches are accumulated, and the protective tariff, but by the few who are in position to take advantage of it. The few get rich at the expense of the many.

But it is a fetish, that is worshipped; and there is no way of getting rid of it, wholly. So we are compelled to temporize with it. The worship is a form of syncretism, that penetrates and permeates both parties, through and through. The servers and thinkers of both parties see it and understand it; but on neither side can they clear their party of the false worship. They will, some time, of course, but they can't now. Local interest and national interest have insidious ways and arguments innumerable. The worker is easily persuaded by the tariff beneficiary that he, too, is a beneficiary; for it is alleged that he would have no work to do and would get no wages but for protective tariff—the profits of which, however, fall into the pockets of the monopolist.

Again, there must be revenue; and from this need it is an easy advance to the demand of tariff distinctly for protection. For in most cases a tariff for revenue yields protection, or exclusion, also. So it seems logical. The aim of protection is to exclude foreign goods, and to secure profits on the manufacture of goods at home. But who gets the profits? The fortunes of the steel and copper and sugar kings will tell you.

But of course we shall still have "protection." It is supported by the spirit and genius of illusion. In actual conditions, in our own country, there is some ground for it; and this is the basis from which it is carried to extremes. The abuses cannot be corrected, nor abated now; but one day there will be a revolt which will upset the basis of parties. When, no one can tell. President Roosevelt is a forceful personality; but even he finds the worship of the fetish too powerful at this time to permit an attempt to check or abate it. To reduce it even within reasonable limits is, for the present, apparently, impossible. When the Democratic party was last in power it merely substituted one protective system for another; and the last state of that tariff was more unjust than the first—inasmuch that President Cleveland announced it and refused to affix his signature. It is impossible, therefore, to turn to the Democratic party for redress or for amendment. Such results can come only through general enlightenment—the same as in relation to the silver craze; which, indeed, was the more immoral and irrational of these twin delusions.

The Lost Cabin Mine.

For many years a tradition has existed that the Lost Cabin mines were located somewhere in the Cascade mountains, and parties from The Dalles and other towns have started out, time and again, to find these rich deposits, says a writer in The Dalles Chronicle. It is over 20 years ago that Mr. Sam L. Simpson, wrote a very interesting and romantic story about the Lost Cabin in the Overland monthly of San Francisco. Of course it was romance, but was supposed to have had for its basis many actual facts. Over 15 years ago, we listened with a great deal of interest to an old prospector who claimed to have discovered the Lost Cabin somewhere in the vicinity of Mount Adams. He spent some time in the cabin, but snow falling very heavily he was forced to leave, or he would have been imprisoned there all winter. When he left the snow was three or four feet deep, and he was endeavoring, when he had this conversation with us, to organize a party to retrace his steps if possible to the "Lost Cabin."

After all these years a dispatch is now published locating the Lost Cabin in Wyoming.

Sheridan, Wyo.—Much excitement has been caused here by the statement of three reputable business men, George H. Cutler, Thomas J. Mitchell and Carl K. Kneisel, who believe they have found the famous Lost Cabin mine, near the summit of the range of the Big Horn mountains, between the heads of Little and Big Goose creeks, 30 miles from Sheridan.

The scene of the discovery is located in one of the wildest spots imaginable, and prospectors must scale steep cliffs and crawl up treacherous trails en route. Cutler and Mitchell were on a hunting trip when they encountered a dilapidated, broken down cabin in a spot seldom traversed by man. In the hut were found newspapers 25 years old. Nearby was a tunnel and a quantity of ore on the dump. Specimens of this ore which were brought to Sheridan are heavy with gold and a metal believed to be platinum. The yellow metal is plainly visible to the naked eye.

The men have been making trips to the scene of their discovery and it is rumored that they have staked out numerous claims in the vicinity of Sheridan.

Some days since a bundle of soiled clothes was missed from one of our laundry wagons. Yesterday our city officials found the bundle at one of our dealers in second-hand goods, and Jesse Burns, who is now serving a jail sentence for stealing a grip from the agent of an eastern railroad, was identified as the person who pawned it to the dealer. There is still a package sent to the express office at Hood River, billed to a man by the name of Lawless, at one of our dealers in second-hand goods, for which Burns may have to answer.—The Dalles Chronicle.

Talks About Oregon Fruit.

C. L. Montague, a prominent fruit buyer and orchardist of Oneida, N. Y., talks entertainingly of the fruit industry as he views it.

He has just returned from a trip through the Yakima district and also visited Walla Walla and finds that Oregon fruits are strictly under the ban in the state of Washington. When asked to the reason for this action on the part of the state of Washington he said that the fruit inspection law of Washington was very strict, and gave the dealers and fruit growers of Washington an opportunity to almost entirely prohibit the entry of outside fruit into the state, if vigorously enforced.

"I have seen some of the cleanest, prettiest most marketable fruit in the Hood River and Milton districts in your state, that it has ever been my lot to look upon in an experience of forty years in the fruit industry, and to the entry of such fruit into any market in the world there could not be the least shadow of objection. But as some isolated cases of infected fruit having been sent from Oregon into Washington, have come under notice, it gives the inspectors an opportunity to be severe upon all Oregon fruit. This serves a double purpose of giving an uninterrupted market to Washington growers in their own markets and prevents the possibility of introduction of infected fruits into the state.

"What Oregon must do in retaliation if retaliation is just and necessary is to pass an equally stringent inspection law and enforce it just as stringently as Washington. This will serve to clean the pests out of Oregon orchards and will make a demand for Oregon fruit which will gradually break down inspection laws which are intended as barriers against Oregon products.

Mr. Montague will purchase several carloads of winter apples in this state and Washington, for the eastern markets this fall. He will send three cars of selected red apples from Hood River to his New York city house—Pendleton E. O.

WHITE SALMON.

Saturday, September 2, the citizens of White Salmon had a meeting again to hear the reports of the different committees appointed to get water in White Salmon valley. The report of the committee was favorable and another committee was appointed to secure money to make a preliminary survey of the district.

Mrs. J. Weyers is on the sick list. The latest reports are that she is a little better.

Maine & Bowman are shipping their prunes this week. They have a big crew picking and packing for them but cannot get as many as they want. Labor is hard to get this summer in White Salmon. We have been short all summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Balsiger and Mr. Hansaker attended the fair at Portland last week.

Another new building is going up at White Salmon for Mr. Thomas.

Mr. Wetherel of Carson came through White Salmon last week to Trout Lake, looking after the fire in the woods there. Mr. Wetherel is deputy fire warden for Skamania county.

There will be a social at the church here Thursday night.

The 8-acre tract of land in Cook addition, known as the Jensen place, was sold last week for $2500 to Mr. Easton of Portland. The sale was made through the White Salmon Land Co.

GLACIER.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Groff on August 8, an 8-pound daughter.

C. G. Ruff is up from Portland looking after his farming interests here.

London & Powers were also here during the week, looking after their fruit ranch in the Mount Hood Valley.

Business with the cream route is increasing, those who have patronized it so far being well pleased with results.

W. H. Trux of Albany was visiting the family of W. A. Huckabay last week. Mrs. Huckabay is a sister to Mr. Trux. She accompanied him to Albany last Friday for a short visit.

Mount Hood farmers are cutting their second crop of clover. The yield is first class, the crop averages 5 tons to the acre from the two cuttings on most of the farms. Mount Hood valley is the ideal dairy country.

Saturday, September 3, there will be a meeting of all the stock holders of the Middle Fork Irrigating Co., at the Mount Hood hall. Important business will be transacted, and it is imperative that all attend this meeting.

Joseph Groff has about completed a new house, 16x34, and two stories in height.

Mr. Huckabay has also completed a neat cottage, and is doing considerable clearing on his ranch.

The Anderson brothers of Carson carried away all the prizes in the log rolling contest at Portland last Thursday. Frank Anderson took first prize, a gold medal; Arthur Anderson, second prize, a silver medal, and Edward Anderson won third prize. Some of the log rollers would not compete with the Anderson brothers for they had met them before and knew there was no use trying.—Stevenson Pioneer.
