

INCIDENTS OF A GREAT BEAR HUNT

M. M. Hill, Frank Stanton and U. A. Newman, who will be recognized as prominent East Side orchard men, with a Mr. Pike of Black Hawk county, Iowa, whom they took along to catch mountain trout, and accompanied by Frank's dog, Dick, to track the bear, started on a hunt.

The sun had not yet risen last Thursday morning when these four men climbed into a mountain back behind Frank's powerful bay team, and with Dick following behind, started up the mountain. After a few hours' drive they reached Louis Burkhard's ranch at the foot of the Lava Beds. Here they left the team and engaged the services of the old hunter as guide. The provisions and blankets were equally divided and strapped upon their shoulders, and with brave hearts they started into the forest.

Up, up they went, through deep ravines and over high, rocky bluffs, through the dark forests where the crack of the hunter's rifle is seldom heard. The shades of evening were fast closing when tired and thirsty they found themselves on a high mountain with the cool water of the mountain brook far below them. They must reach this before dark. Hastily they began the descent. The packs grew heavier upon their shoulders, but the inventive mind of M. M. Hill devised a scheme to descend with greater ease. Unfastening his pack he started on a steep bank. It gathered momentum as it went and bounded and rolled into the middle of the swift stream. Long before the hunters reached the bottom it was lost in the darkness. It contained all the blankets.

The evening meal was soon prepared and they settled around the camp fire to pass the night as best they could without blankets. And a long night it was. U. A. Newman burrowed a hole in the soft ground beside the fire. Frank Stanton and Louis Burkhard took turns at keeping the fire going.

The night passed with but one mishap. M. M. Hill was aroused in the midst of his dream by his hat catching fire and it was partly burned before he awoke. In the early morning under the direction of Burkhard, they separated in search of game. Pike could not fish; the foxy trout would not bite. The great forests were new to him and he gazed continually at the lofty fir and cedar and did not wander far from their rendezvous. Hill walked until he no longer knew in which direction he was going. Even the sun was moving in the wrong direction. He made his way over deep ravines and across mountain torrents and as a last resort in the middle of the afternoon, climbed to the top of a high mountain and found himself at the very spot where he started his blankets rolling the night before.

Frank Stanton and his dog Dick fared not so well. Dick led him high up the mountain far from camp. He began to return, but too late—he was lost in the forest. He knew of but one thing to do—find a mountain stream and follow it to its mouth. He immediately started down the mountain gorge. The mountain trout lay quietly in the brook, but he did not stop to fish. He started two deer from their feeding ground, but he was too frightened to shoot straight. At just sundown he came in sight of the cabin of a rancher. The most welcome sight he ever saw. He set out to collect his thoughts. His hands were cut and bruised. His trousers were badly torn; one leg was entirely gone below the knee. With great ingenuity he took his shoes strings, and with his pocket knife for a needle, sewed together the remnants of his trousers. Thus making himself more presentable, he proceeded to the cabin, where he was hospitably received and his wants supplied.

The hunters that night gathered at the cabin of the old trapper O'Field, and were greatly concerned about the non-appearance of Frank Stanton. The trapper gladly shared with them his bed, and they slept that night five in a row, huddled together like sheep under two small blankets. The next morning they started for home in search of Frank Stanton. They found him sitting in the door of Burkhard's cabin, one leg crossed over the other, his arms folded and calmly smoking his pipe. It took them one whole day to recuperate under Louis Burkhard's hospitable care, and then M. M. Hill, Frank Stanton and U. A. Newman returned home, where they will verify the truth of this hunting trip.

Kills Neighbor in Self-Defense.
Dufur Springs was the scene of a tragedy last Tuesday morning, when Charles Underwood shot and killed Dick Darnell or Bennett as he was commonly known. Underwood surrendered at once to the authorities, and was taken to The Dalles last Wednesday by Sheriff Sexton.

The inquest conducted by Coroner Borgez revealed the following facts: Bennett had leased a farm to Underwood, reserving the right to so much garden truck, in which apples were not mentioned. The men had frequently quarreled over the division and Monday when Mrs. Bennett went over to get some apples they were refused her. Her husband was working with a threshing crew and when he returned that night was informed of the treatment given. Bennett, who was a hot-headed fellow, fired up at once, and compelling his hired man, Simmons, to accompany him, started out for Underwood's. Entering the house, armed with his usual weapon, a Winchester, he informed Underwood and his brother-in-law, Woodward, who with Mr. and Mrs. McCabe were in the house, that they must go at once and apologize to Mrs. Bennett or he would settle with them. There was no hint left to do under the circumstances but go, and that without shoes, as Bennett would brook no delay. On the way Woodward, who is but a boy, started to run. Bennett fired a shot at him, but he got away. Underwood climbed the hill in his bare feet and apologized to the lady. As he left the house Bennett said to him: "If you're not out of the country tomorrow I'll kill you."

No sooner was Underwood home than with Woodward he went and borrowed a neighbor's gun, and going up the road laid in wait until Bennett passed going to his work in the morning. Then, hid behind some trees, he fired. A number of shots were fired, but although there was a shot out of Bennett's gun, it was not determined whether or not he fired it at that time. One of Underwood's bullets killed Bennett's horse also.

The sympathy of the neighborhood seems to be with Underwood, who is a young man of 23 years and has always

No woman can look beautiful without good health. A woman's good health depends on the organs peculiarly feminine, and which so often become disordered, causing misery and dragging-down pain. Nature's laws are perfect, health endures if you obey them, but disease follows disobedience. The distressing complaints of women are often brought about by catching cold at a critical period, breathing foul indoors air and long hours of work and nervous tension. Go straight to Nature for the cure—the forest. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is Nature's cure for the distressing complaints of women. Prof. King, M. D., in his American Dispensatory, says of Black Cohosh or Black Snake root—"one of the most valuable drugs we possess for the cure of diseases of women. It is surpassed by no other drug, in congestive conditions of the parts where there are dragging pains and tenderness."

Lady's Slipper root is a "nerve stimulant and tonic, improving both circulation and nutrition of the nerve centers—favoring sleep and cheerful condition of the mind; of service in mental depression, nervous headache, irregularities of women with dependency."—Prof. King. Besides the above ingredients there are—Golden Seal, Unicorn and Blue Cohosh roots in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Over 100 pages and illustrated. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

been considered a quiet young fellow, while Bennett was known to be quarrelsome. His victim was about 35 years of age and leaves a wife and three children.

Pleased to Secure Mr. Hall.
Dallas Observer.
The jurisdiction of Rinaldo M. Hall, advertising agent of the O. R. & N. Co., has been extended to include the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon. This will be pleasing news to the people of the Willamette valley and southern Oregon, as this somewhat neglected portion of the state will be sure to receive attention from now on.

Mr. Hall is a brilliant and forceful writer, and his descriptions of the country reached by the O. R. & N. lines have been an invaluable factor in attracting immigration to Eastern Oregon and the Columbia river valley. In addition to his work of preparing folders, pamphlets and other publications for his company, he has been a steady contributor to the leading advertising magazines and periodicals, and his articles descriptive of the Pacific Northwest have attracted much favorable attention and comment.

An important feature of Mr. Hall's work is his regard for truth and accuracy of detail. Care is taken to avoid exaggeration and careless statements, and home-seekers have learned that they can depend upon any information contained in publication sent out from his department. Western Oregon has long needed some man like Mr. Hall to tell the world of its wonderful resources and advantages, and now that Mr. Craig has placed him at the head of the new department, all may rest assured that the work will be performed thoroughly and well.

Oregon Exhibit is the Best.
1001 First St., Seattle, Wash., Sept. 15, 1905.—Editor Glacier: Arriving in Portland so late Monday evening "bitting the trail" was the only thing doing, so that was "hit with broad smile." But Tuesday, by hunting, managed to take a prep into the Government, Oregon, Washington, Forestry, Agriculture and Oriental buildings.

Oregon has the best exhibits there. California and Washington come next, while North Dakota has the most unique display of exhibits. Florida, my home state, was asleep when the fair was known to the rest of the world. Therefore, the "Land of Flowers" is not there. Florida has awakened, and will be at the Jamestown fair in 1907.
