IN A COMPROMISING SITUATION

$$+$$+$$ am sure," said Mrs. Railton, fixme with her eagle glance, before which even bishops have been known to quail-"I am sure you will like to be the first to congratulate Sylvia on her engagement to Mr. Oswald Fitz-

"But Mr. Fitzgerald"— I began "Is suitable in every way," continued Mrs. Railton, heedless of my attempted remark. "He is just the man to make Sylvia a capital husband."

"He bas, I am aware, $50,000 a year," I said bitterly "but he is old enough to be her father.

"My dear Gerald," remonstrated Mrs. Railton in her most bland tone, "how can you say such things! Mr. Fitzger ald is quite a young man still, and by many people he is considered extremely handsome. Pray don't put such notions into Sylvia's head." I held my peace, and after studying my countenance carefully for a few moments Mrs. Railton continued: "I have told you this because I have thought-although, of course, I may be mistaken-that your affection for Sylvia has been becoming a little more

So I made a somewhat hasty departure without waiting to see Sylvia. On the way back to my rooms in the Metropolitan club I brooded over my wrongs. There could be no doubt that Sylvia had treated me very badly. I recalled numerous sentimental little passages between us. Besides, I had a box wherein lay a miniature portrait of Sylvia, some letters from her, a trinket off a bangle, a bandkerchief and some few other unconsidered trifles. The sight of these strengthened my sense of righteous indignation, and while it was still upon me I seized a ne time more dignined. Acting upon

"Sylvia!" I exclaimed in amused

"I managed to lose sight of her just now in Fifth avenue, and it occurre to me that perhaps she had met so one she knew, possibly yourself. But if you have been in all the afternoon of course my surmise is incorrect. She has probably gone home. Will you see me down to the carriage? What charming chambers?" She raised her eyeglasses. "What is this? A letter addressed to Sylvia? Shall I take it to her?" She was about to pick it up when there was a terrific crash and a faint scream, unmistakably in Sylvia's "Sylvia!" she exclaimed in majestic accents as Sylvia emerged, dis-closing a vista of broken crockery. "I am sorry, aunt," I said gravely, "that Sylvia should be found in such a compromising situation; but, after all, there is a very good way out of it." Mrs. Railton's horrified gaze removed itself from Sylvia's face to me and demanded my meaning.

"She can always as a last resource come engaged to me," I continued "Of course I am a very bad match for her, but we are very much attached to each other-as you see-

It was Saturday, and there was an air of peace within and without that soothed my wounded feelings. I lit a cigarette and lounged in an easy chair before the open window. The sound of a cab approaching rapidly aroused me. Looking out of my window, I saw that it contained Sylvia. As she stepped out of the cab at my door, looking more bewitching even than usual, I noticed that she carried a letter in her hand. Thus forewarned I answered her hurried knock at the door with a mathurried knock at the door with a mat-ter of fact "Come in" and evinced none of the surprise she evidently expected me to feel at her appearance.

FRED HOWE.

Candidate for State Printer.

WILLIAM J. CLARKE.

He was born in Marion county near Salem in 1857 and is a son of Samuel A. Clarke, the well known editorial writer of a former generation.

Mr. Clarke is a practical printer as well as a trained newspaper man and, in connection with his father, for a number of years published the Salem Statesman and the Willamette Salem Statesman and the Willamette Farmer. He is not only a successful newspaper man, but is a successful business man as well and is thoroughly equipped to take charge of a printing concern of any magnitude. His long experience in the newspaper buisness has put him in touch with all questions affecting the public interests and he may be relied upon to administer the affairs of any trust placed in him with honesty and fidelity.

Mr. Clarke's wide acquaintance throughout the state and his long residence at the state capital has made him so familiar with legislative matters that he would go into office prepared to take charge of every detail in connection with the big printery and render a good administration of its affairs.
