

FAVORABLE REPORT ON GOLD RUN ORE

Hall-Lewis, who has had considerable experience as a mining engineer and in hydraulics in the mines of California, has made an examination of specimens from the Gold Run mine for the Gold Run Mining company, and makes a very favorable report.

After spending three days in listening to the evidence in the case the undershot rather than an overshot wheel which was the plan of R. H. Cox, president of the company, Mr. Hall-Lewis says in his report:

I have examined with great interest the exhibits from the Gold Run Mining company's property which were left at my office some days ago, and have carefully considered the several questions concerning equipment for development work, which were asked at that time.

I have come to the conclusion that with the present supply of water at hand during the dry seasons of the year, it would be much better for you to install an undershot, rather than an overshot wheel for the following reasons. As I understand the conditions hydraulically, you have a maximum fall of twenty feet, equal to the diameter of the wheel you propose to install, with a doubtful supply of water beyond ten inches in dry seasons.

This water discharged upon an overshot wheel of the type you propose might be adequate for light work of present needs, but I would advise that your works be so constructed, and the type of wheel so altered as to discharge the water in a tall flume beneath the wheel, preserving the twenty feet of "head" by confining water in a stand pipe leading from flume above to a point of discharge so arranged as to gain the most effective leverage at the bottom of wheel.

This arrangement will render much more dependable than the overshot arrangement, as you can readily understand when I remind you that water confined throughout the vertical fall exerts pressures in which to the weight of the volume of water is added the influence of compact and continuous flow; and for the further reason that in an undershot wheel, the power is directed and becomes effective at the point of tangency of the wheel, or in other words at right angles with the vertical center of the wheel, whereas upon an overshot wheel, there is a loss of volume and loss of leverage, greatest at point of discharge, and never as small as with the undershot, throughout the quadrant of revolution where the water over an overshot wheel does its work.

In the matter of the samples of ore which you left me, I feel disposed to regard the richer samples as unfair upon which to base the estimated value, for the principal reason that they are to my mind too rich to indicate in the formation in which you are working, the true character of the vein. I was particularly interested, however, in the large specimen of about twenty pounds weight.

This rock bears what I consider every indication of being from such a vein as they would find in California, a "stratified" deposit, in which the metallic deposit throughout the mass, and the uniformly maliferous nature thereof, all are pretty certain, I might almost say infallible, indications of a deep reaching deposit, which, considering the heavy values of the small specimens taken from higher levels where the distribution of metal has been found to be less uniform, prompts the conclusion that you are dealing with a very deep vein.

Some curious instances of the physical defect of "word blindness" are given in the Lancet. The disease is fortunately uncommon. In one case the sufferer, an Englishman, thirty-four years of age, who knew Greek, Latin and French well, suddenly lost all knowledge of English, though he could read and understand Greek perfectly and Latin and French in a rather smaller degree. Another and almost more curious case was that of a man who lost the power of reading at sight. This patient was able to write accurately from dictation, but was completely unable to read what he had written. Word blindness is apparently akin to color blindness, but is certainly attended by much more inconvenient consequences.

He Asked. Papa (severely)—Did you ask mamma if you could have that apple? Three-Year-Old—Yes, sir. Papa—Be careful now. I'll ask mamma. Three-Year-Old—Truly, papa, I asked her, but she said I couldn't have it.

Reassured. Sick Man—Am I to take all that medicine? Wife—Yes; all of it. Sick Man—There's enough in that bottle to kill a donkey. Wife—No, there isn't, John, or the doctor wouldn't have prescribed it.

A SHIP'S DOCTOR. The Things For Which He Should or Should Not Be Paid. A correspondent of Lloyd's Weekly has expressed the views of a ship doctor in the following words: "Many travelers are in doubt as to the position of the ship's doctor in regard to his remuneration for passengers for services rendered. The merchant shipping act enacts that every foreign going vessel having a hundred persons on board or upward shall carry on board as part of her complement a duly qualified medical practitioner. Furthermore, an emigrant ship—i. e., a foreign going vessel which carries fifty or more passengers—must have a medical man, irrespective of the number of crew or of other passengers carried. The salary of the doctor on board is commensurate with these duties to his ship. To any passengers who are suffering from ordinary forms of seasickness and its concomitant evils or who receives injuries which are in any way due to the ship the doctor's services are free. For any sickness contracted before sailing or during a voyage which is not connected with the above named conditions he is entitled to a remuneration at the same rate as he would receive on shore. Obviously it would be an unfair to expect that his services to passengers should be rendered gratis as it would be for any visitor in a hotel or traveling on a railway to expect to have medical attention free in any illness for which the hotel or railway authorities could not be held responsible."
