ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Republicans of Wasco county:
I hereby announce myself as a candidate for nomination upon the Republican ticket for Sheriff of Wasco county, subject to the vote cast at the primary election to be held April 24th, 1906.
If nominated and elected, I promise to fulfill the duties of the office to the best of my abilities by being courteous to all and giving the office the same careful attention that I would if it was my personal business.

Yours respectfully,
LEVI CHRISMAN.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Hood River, Ore., Jan. 16, 1906.
Editor Glacier:
I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I shall be a candidate at the primary election to be held in April of this year for the republican nomination for representative in the legislature from Wasco county.
If I should receive the nomination and be elected I shall, to the utmost of my ability, serve the interests of Wasco county, and especially the interests of the western portion of the county and Hood River Valley. A. A. JAYNE.

Binger Herman appeared in the house of representatives Monday and was sworn in as a member of the present session. This will insure him his mileage and pay. It is not expected he will take his seat and attempt to take part in the proceedings of the house. Mr. Herman has not entirely recovered from his late illness.

The Dalles Chronicle has installed the latest improved Merchenthaler type setting machine. With this machine the management will be able to still further improve the daily and weekly editions of the Chronicle. The substantial increase of business accorded the Chronicle by the business men of The Dalles has made it possible to add this improvement. The Glacier is glad to note the success of its contemporary at the county seat.

NOMINATING PRIMARY LAW.

While we think the people at large and the majority of Republicans of the state of Oregon endorse the new law with reference to the nomination and election of candidates, yet it is our opinion that in order to make it what the framers of the law intended and what the voters desire, some amendments are necessary. We give it as our opinion that after the primaries are held there should be county conventions in every county of the state to endorse the winning candidates, and which convention would adopt a platform upon which candidates of the respective parties could go before the people. Then the others could be assured upon the election of a man upon the platform of his party who could be expected of the winning candidate once elected. Under the provisions of the present untried law it is everybody for himself and the devil for the hindmost.

A fitting illustration of this was brought to light at the last city election in Portland wherein the venerable and honorable Gen. W. Williams was defeated for Mayor. Several candidates were in the field at the primaries, and for some cause, presumably some of them were sore over their defeat, they failed to warn the collar at the election and the result was the old man was defeated. It is our opinion that nothing can succeed without an intelligent leadership. No church, no lodge, no business can expect success without leadership and management. Then why not have an advisory committee made up of representatives of each party to look out and endorse certain candidates, then by united effort whom they want and have some assurance that they will come out in the election and once elected then we would know where to find them. As it is each candidate must make and stand upon his own platform. Sometimes platforms are made to get on only, but as republicans under the square deal administration we want a platform that will do to ride on as well as to get aboard on.

View Points on Development.

In all work for achievement there must be a recognition of Nature's processes, and we must not forget that there is no domain outside of Nature, consequently all movements should be along her lines.
Back of all attempts at improvement lies the creative force of thought. In the impulse to do lies the ability to achieve, the only wanting factor is the knowledge of the how. That stage reached, the active will soon put the idea into reality. But we must follow along certain lines that have in them the specific moral quality that will insure the highest success. This quality is largely expressed by harmony, and harmony means the bringing together with faith in each other, those who possess the various elements necessary for the work.
In view of this we hail with glad assurance the convening of congress, of gatherings of any sort which bring together those who represent the various factors in improvement. Development means taking crude material and placing it to higher use, means opening up the soil by tillage, planting and seeding it and caring for its products; it means taking what the soil has given forth and putting it where it can be used; it means delving into the earth for its stores of treasures to be used as new resources of energy; it means threading continents with lines of steel and placing on the seas huge burden bearers to make highways between producer and consumer; it means, in fine, to correlate all agencies in honorable assistance, one with the other, to advance the possibilities of the earth and the human race, Nature's specific ultimate.

These new projects then of the workers on the different lines of labor coming together and presenting the various sides of the questions of the hour predicated one of the great steps of this new century, prophesied as the beginning of the great new era of progress.

When the man who has money calls upon the man who has supply, or the elements of the work with him, and they call on the traffic managers for their assistance we have the beginning of harmonious methods in development.

The man with the hoe is the equal of the man with the hammer and plane and both are equals of the man whose abilities lie in a direct financial line or who deals in the commodity of exchange, money. All are parts of the working whole of the legitimate business world. Business ought to be written business, for that is what it is.

A clearer understanding through congenial fraternities of the industrial problems of the day is the thing in order now.

Organized capital and organized labor are steps toward a better industrial situation, and now we want the close affiliation of the two because both are needed in the days that are upon us and each needs to find that they are the two handles of the great wheel which holds the crown of success for future days.

The earth, the air and the sea are the great storehouses whence come the supplies for the human race, and while we inhabit the earth, plane it is our duty to make use of that which, for the time, we are stewards, and in the work to find the base line of more exalted life when we are transported to another and higher place of labor.

So there needs to be harmony here in order, first to carry out the work of developing the resources of the country, which means betterment, and secondly, opening up the resources of ourselves, which means betterment also, both being in direct evolutionary method according to cosmic law and jurisprudence.

Mrs. M. A. CONGDON.
Disturbing Equilibrium of Commerce.
J. Walter Lord contributes a thoughtful article to the November number of the North American Review, under the caption "A Brief Review of the Subject of Federal Railroad Regulation." Therein he writes in part as follows: "Rate making, while not an exact science, is one requiring special skill and training, but most of all, a thorough knowledge and close observation of the varying conditions to which rates are adapted. On the railroads of the country, several hundred experts, each with a large staff of assistants, are exclusively engaged upon the business of making and adjusting rates. These rates have to be changed from time to time, and not infrequently upon very short notice. Would it, therefore, be wise to commit this power to a very small body of untrained men, who could not have the opportunity to keep themselves accurately informed as to the diverse conditions attending railroad operations?"

As to the advisability of any change in the existing system, Mr. Lord says: "Assuming the right of Congress to invest the Commission with such power, could that body satisfactorily adjust rates with out disturbing equilibrium and without working a preference to some ports? And as a measure of doubtful constitutionality, involving a radical departure from our present governmental policy, is it preferred to an existing form of legislation which has done useful service in minimizing an evil similar to the one desired now to be corrected, is it advisable?"

DESKS OF FAMOUS MEN.

There Are Many of Them Scattered About the Country.

The desk of Salmon P. Chase, a plain piece of furniture made from mahogany, is in one of the rooms of the treasury department at Washington. There are many of these old desks scattered about the country, their chief claim to interest being that once some well known man leaned over them.

Alexander Hamilton's traveling desk, made of mahogany and measuring 12 by 16 inches and 10 inches high, is an interesting object. Upon this desk was written much of his literary work, and the worn green baize with which it is lined attests to the use to which it was put. There is a drawer in one side and several compartments for pens and ink, while upon the top is inscribed a silver plate with the name "General Alexander Hamilton" engraved upon it. Within the top is a strip of parchment which says, "Given by Mrs. General Schuyler to her daughter, Mrs. General A. Hamilton." No doubt the conventional size was what recommended it to the general.

Nathaniel Hawthorne's desk is preserved at the customhouse, Salem, Mass. A desk at which he wrote some of his inimitable romances was just a board standing out from the wall at an angle. This is still in the tower room at Weymouth, his home at Concord, Mass. Victor Hugo had in his Geneva house a study built almost entirely of glass and perched upon the roof. Like Hawthorne, he, too, stood at his writing, and his desk was a mere shelf fastened by hinges to the wall.—Define Origin of a Phrase.

Many years ago the wild deer that roamed through the forests of England used to dig holes in the earth with their forefeet. They pawed it out sometimes to the depth of several inches, sometimes a foot or more. These holes were called "scraps" and travelers at dusk or night or those who were careless about their footing often tumbled into them. They were laughed at for their heedlessness when they came home covered with mud, and, as this frequently occurred after they had been imbibing a bit, they were said to have "got into a scrape." Some Cambridge students took up this expression, and thus it came to be applied to people who had got into difficulties of various sorts.

Cooked Under Water.

In 1766 one James Austin laid a wage of $2000 that he would cook a plum pudding ten feet beneath the surface of the Thames near Rotherhithe. The bet was readily accepted, and many people flocked to the appointed locale to watch this strange exhibition of the culinary art. Inclosed in a tin pan in the center of a sack of lime the pudding was lowered beneath the water, where for two hours and a half it remained. It was then taken up and paraded by a committee, who declared that Austin had won his wager, the pudding being, if anything, overdone.

Praise the sea, but keep on the land.—Herbert.
